Peek Quits Job In New Deal Rift On Trade Policy

Letter, Accepted, Shows He Tried to Resign Last July.

Bank Post Offered To Jesse H. Jones

Retiring Official Frames Report Said to Criticize Canada Pact.

By Felix Bruner.

George N. Peek, one of the original New Deal "brain trusters," severed all connections with the Government yesterday with acceptance of his resignation as president of the Export-Import Banks. Peek's letter of resignation, dated November 26, also revealed that he had quit as a special adviser to the President on foreign trade.

The resignation, which had been rumored for months, was announced by R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State and chairman of the trustees of the banks, who also announced that Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, had been offered the bank presidency to succeed Peek.

The letter of resignation, addressed to Moore, was presented to the trustees who accepted it in a meeting lasting only a few minutes. Jones declined to comment immediately, but indicated he would make a statement today.

Text of Peek's Letter.

Peek, in his letter, revealed his intention of resigning as early as last July, but indicated he had been dissuaded by President Roosevelt. His letter said:

"On July 16, 1935, I addressed a letter to you tendering to the board of trustees of the Export-Import Banks my resignation as president and trustee of the banks. That letter was not mailed, as the President requested me to withhold action for the time being.

"However, circumstances have arisen now which today resulted in my writing the President advising him of my resignation as special adviser and as president and trustee of the Export-Import Banks, effective today. Will you be kind enough to inform the board of trustees of my action by laying this letter before them?"

His Stormy Career.

Peek has been preparing a report on the recent Canadian reciprocal trade agreement. The report is said to be strongly opposed to the agreement and to the Administration policy. He recently indicated that the report, which he said would be in "simple language," would be presented to the President on the latter's return to Washington next week. Moore said he knew nothing of the report and Peek was in New York and unavailable for comment.

Peek's association with the Administration has been a stormy one. He was one of the first of the New Dealers, coming here in May, 1933, as head of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. There he disagreed with Secretary Wallace and with Rexford Guy Tugwell, now Undersecretary of Agriculture. From the agricultural post he was shifted to the State Department to advise Secretary Hull on reciprocal trade policies.

Transferred From AAA.

Finding himself in disagreement with his chiefs in the State Department, Peek was shifted to the Export-Import Bank presidency, retaining his place as adviser to the President on foreign commerce.

Florid-faced, positive, but not talkative, Peek has failed to fit in with other New Dealers almost from the beginning. He is a close student of agriculture, having been a leader in the farm movement and a farm implement manufacturer. He is a close friend of the fiery Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who has been insisting that Peek should be Secretary of Agriculture.

Peek's resignation brought considerable speculation as to his future moves. Some of his friends believed that he might join such former Administration officials as

Orders Relief Slash

GEORGE E. ALLEN.

PWA Creates $800,000,000 Building Boom

U.S. Contractors Swamped, With Big Sum Allotted for 4,000 Jobs.

One of the biggest public construction booms ever experienced in this country is about to get under way with the awarding of PWA contracts. The job is so big that it has officials worried, not because of any lack of money or places to put it, but because of lack of contractors and experts to handle and supervise the task.

President Roosevelt set December 15 as the deadline when PWA contracts must be awarded. Throughout the country States and municipalities are advertising for bids for these projects, which with Federal and local funds added, will cost $800,000,000.

4,000 Separate Jobs.

Many of the jobs are large and the specifications are complicated. Contractors have been studying them for weeks, selecting the ones on which they wish to bid, but ignoring others. It is expected in some instances, because all the work is coming at once, there will be no bidders or no satisfactory bidders.

When the PWA started under its first appropriation the work got under way gradually. Under the new appropriation, all of it is expected to start almost simultaneously. Not only are contractors swamped with the offers for bids, which cover 4,000 separate construction jobs, but material manfacturers are looking for such a demand as they seldom, if ever have experienced. Manufacturers of basic materials, such as cement, bricks and structural steel, have been stocking up in anticipation of the demand.

Extension Is Expected.

Complicating the situation is the fact that the WPA is at last getting under way simultaneously with the start of PWA construction. From this source also will come a huge demand for materials with instructions to rush their shipment. The WPA demand will be sustained over only a comparatively brief period and the PWA operation will gradually decline, but Administration deadlines have brought the peaks of demand together.

While there has been no official announcement, and none is expected before December 15, it is likely that in many individual instances it will

District Dole Ordered Cut 25 Per Cent

Allen Calls for Slash as U. S. Stops Cash for Direct Aid.

10,500 Cases Affected; Reduction in Force Within Month.

Twenty-five per cent cut in payments to all District relief clients was ordered yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen, works and relief administrator.

The same slash was ordered in administration costs.

A 10 per cent cut in relief budgets was ordered effective yesterday. Additional cuts are to be made during the remainder of the month so that at the end of December all will have been cut 25 per cent.

The horizontal cut in relief payments was the first put into effect since public relief was launched in the National Capital with the aid of Federal millions. The cut was made necessary, Commissioner Allen said, by the withdrawal of Federal funds, which in the past have constituted the major part of the monthly relief expenditures.

10,500 Cases Affected.

It will affect more than 10,500 relief cases and will involve both employables and unemployables on relief rolls. Officials said they expect 2,000 more to re-apply for relief before the end of the month.

Amounts of relief payments have varied as between families and individuals, being based on individual needs, but the average payment was $30 during November, according to Elwood Street, director of public welfare. The reduction order will mean that the payments will be reduced so that the average amount given during December will be $22.50 per case.

Still Over Appropriation.

The reductions to be made will leave the District payments still more than $100,000 above the $166,666 monthly allotment of the $2,000,000 appropriated for local relief for the fiscal year. Officials are hopeful they will be given $140,000 additional by Federal relief authorities to meet the monthly deficit.

Administration expenditures have amounted to $37,800 during October. There was little change during November, it was said. This total is to be brought down to $51,000 during December. Discharge of many persons will be necesasry to achieve the reduction, it was said.

Transfer of 3,000 or more women from relief rolls to WPA projects is expected to be achieved during the week. Some 2,000 are to be at work today in three sewing rooms, operated with WPA funds. Two more sewing rooms are to be opened tomorrow. There is to be a total of 12.

Another 1,000 women are expected to be put to work in them making articles for the needy. Shifting of these women to WPA projects, however, will not relieve District relief rolls immediately because they must be carried on relief for the two weeks which must elapse between their assignment to WPA jobs and the receipt of their first WPA pay checks.

Clipper Weathers Gale on Guam Hop

Plane, Half-Way to Goal, Cruises Leisurely.

By the United Press.

Wake Island (Tuesday), Dec. 3.—The China Clipper, nearing the half-way mark between Guam and Wake, had weathered an extensive wind and rainstorm and was cruising leisurely, 600 miles out of Guam, at 1 p. m., Wake time (9 p. m. Monday, Eastern standard time).

According to radio advices from the clipper, sent by Capt. Edwin C. Musick, no difficulty had been encountered in handling the ship during the buffeting it received while passing through severe rain squalls and bucking a lashing 38-mile-an-hour headwind.

The weather had cleared to a large extent and visibility was good, Capt. Musick advised. Temperature had risen from 67 degrees to 84 degrees and the wind had shifted to a southeasterly direction.

The plane was averaging approximately 115 miles per hour, flying at an altitude of 800 feet.

Reich Synod Leaders Defy New Nazi Curb; Put 'God Above Man'

Administrative Powers Denied; Churchmen Welcome Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 2.—A Nazi decree depriving opposition Protestant groups of all authoritative and administrative rights stirred the fighting spirit of the German Confessional Synod leaders to a new high pitch tonight.

A Confessional spokesman declared categorically that he and his colleagues had not the slightest intention of accepting the dictation of Hans Kerrl, head of the national department for church affairs.

On the other hand, he said, they rejoice that the issue is clear cut.

Confessional pastors, the spokesman asserted, intend to hold strictly to their principle of obeying God before man.

Kerrl's proscriptions, it was pointed out, were listed by Bishop Karl Koch, leader of the Prussian Confessionals, on November 27 in warning the Nazi church director that retention of those functions was essential to future co-operation between the Confessional Synod and Kerrl's church committees.

As an example, Confessional spokesmen said their pastors had been examining 70 per cent of all evangelical theological candidates—something which would be denied them under the new ruling.

Kerrl's decree was explained as an attempt to bring unity within the German Evangelical Church.

Nazi church officials, appointed by Kerrl more than two months ago, were given complete authority and the Protestant confessional groups, although not mentioned by name in the decree, were forbidden the right of church taxation, collection of funds and convocation of synods.

Opposition factions also were denied the powers of nominating ministers, assisting in nomination or examination of candidates for the clergy or making announcements from the pulpit.

These organizations were threatened with dissolution if they exercise forbidden authority, although Kerrl said the confessional synod as well as other church groups

D. C. Boundary Truce Sought In Compromise

Board Would Give U. S. Land East of Roaches Run, Airport to Va.

To settle the ancient boundary feud between the District of Columbia and Virginia, Congress and the Virginia Legislature will be asked to ratify a compromise which gives to the United States jurisdiction of all land east of the Mount Vernon Memorial highway at Roaches Run and, to the Old Dominion, the disputed area on which stand Washington Airport, Hoover Field, and plants of the Southern Oxygen Co. and the American Oil Co.

This was learned yesterday on unimpeachable authority in spite of revocation of plans to make public this week the report of the Virginia-District of Columbia boundary commission.

It was definitely understood that the Federal Government, which represents the District's interests, would get not only the territory lying between the memorial boulevard and the Potomac River, but also a 150-foot strip west of the highway, on the Virginia side. This allotted area includes Gravelly Point, which has been widely indorsed as a site for Washington's proposed municipal airport.

To Virginia would go the section, much more important from the standpoint of land value and property taxation, which takes in the Capital's present landing facilities for civil aviation and such industrial enterprises as the oxygen and oil companies.

"The commission has established a boundary line of convenience," said Chairman Charles H. Brough,

U. S. to Deny Registering Perils Rights; Associated Gas Joins Appeals.

Confronted with a battery of more than two-score injunction suits against utility law enforcement, beseiged legal counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission last night were preparing to strike back with an answer that will chart the course of the Government's defense against wholesale restraining orders.

The vast Associated Gas & Electric system yesterday added its protest to the nearly solid front of utility appeals to the courts against the law's rigors. At the same time, it asked the Federal Power Commission for permission to merge five Kentucky and Tennessee power company affiliates.

Although a daily barrage of injunction suit notices have bombarded the SEC for the last fortnight, the commission has yet to reply to any of them. Commission attorneys are shaping the first answer carefully, realizing it may serve as a model for all of the rest.

To all the suits for injunction, the commission is expected to reply that no legal or constitutional rights of utilities are necessarily jeopardized by registration. They may cite the opinion of Federal Judge William H. Holly, of Chicago, who advised the Public Utilities Securities Corporation to register, but reserve their constitutional rights.

In refusing to register, utilities on the other hand, generally have taken the view that this act alone would impair their future legal

Those 'Great Bankers' Remain Tight-Locked Roosevelt Secret

'No Answer,' Replies Little White House When Asked Who Said U. S. Could Stand a Debt of 70 Billions; Inquiry Here Fails.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 2.—The identity of the "great bankers" who told President Roosevelt in the spring of 1933 that this country could stand without danger a national debt of between $55,000,000,000 and $70,000,000,000 is as much a mystery to the Presidential party here as it is to the remainder of the country.

The answer for the present is locked up in the "Little White House," the temporary residence of the President. Inquiries so far have brought no answer.

The President has not had a press conference since his Atlanta speech and that event is the only occasion on which he can be asked directly to whom he referred. A press conference, however, is scheduled for tomorrow.

It has been suggested here that the President may not name the bankers to whom he referred in order not to embarrass them now. It was pointed out that in March, 1933, when banks by the hundreds were facing collapse, some bankers, rushing to Washington for help, may have made statements which the President has indicated he thinks were exaggerated.

Meanwhile, efforts in Washington to clear up the mystery and learn just which of the "great bankers," the phrase used by the President, had believed the country could safely stand such a large public debt, were unsuccessful.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was asked his own opinion of the size of a "safe" national debt, but declined to mention specific figures or comment on those given in the President's speech.

He would only go so far as to say: "I think the country can stand a good deal of anything; it's a pretty good country."

He denied knowing what bankers had advised the President on the

By the United Press.

London (Tuesday, Dec. 3.—The Daily Herald's Tokyo correspondent reported today that the Japanese delegation to the Naval Conference here has been instructed to seek a new agreement, designed to preserve peace in the Pacific Ocean regions, among the United States, Britain, France and Japan.

The correspondent understood that Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota hopes a new Pacific agreement can be reached even if the naval conversations fail, as he fears they will, and that it will include these points:

1. Permanent neutralization of the Philippines, involving permanent withdrawal of the United States fleet and Army units stationed in the islands.

1921 Treaty Cited.

2. Renewal and amendment of the four-power treaty of 1921, making it into a general non-aggression pact.

3. Pledging by each of the four powers not to attack or molest the territories of the others in the Pacific.

4. Renewal of Article 19 of the naval limitation treaty of 1922, which expires at the end of this year.

The newspaper's diplomatic correspondent, commenting on the dispatch, believed it unlikely an agreement can be reached. Hirota's reported plan, he points out, would mean practical recognition of Japan's complete dominance of the western Pacific Ocean and would be equal to giving her a free hand in China—a scheme to which the powers hardly could agree.

Article 19 of the 1922 naval limitation agreement, which Japan reportedly would like renewed, provided that there should be no further fortification of specified Pacific possessions of the signatory powers.

Parley Hope Dims.

London, Dec. 2 (AP).—Japan's delegation to the international naval conference struck a sharp blow today at the possibility of success of the parley.

Admiral Osami Nagano, Japan's chief representative, who arrived with the other Japanese delegates, dumped a seemingly immovable obstacle in the path by declaring the Japanese position was unchanged since 1934, when preliminary talks failed.

Informed British sources admitted the outlook for the conference opening next Monday is dark. Admiral Nagano declining to predict the Japanese attitude if the conference failed, said, "it is improper to discuss failure before the conference even starts."

Japan, said the admiral, was not prepared to agree to limitation by categories without a global tonnage limit for fleets.

Numbers Agreed.

(Under the category plan, now in effect, the naval powers agree to build no more than a fixed number in each particular type of ship, such as cruisers, destroyers and the like. Under the global tonnage limit proposal, only the total tonnage of ships of each nation would be limited, permitting the nation to build any number of ships it wished in each category, provided the total tonnage did not exceed the fixed figure.)

The Japanese chief delegate declared his country was prepared for a drastic reduction in armaments to the level of the defensive needs of the nations.

Unless Japan changes her position, experts felt, the conference may be doomed by the Japanese refusal to discuss limitation on size of ships and guns. Japan has said she would consider this only if her demand for parity with Great Britain and the United States, as contrasted with the present 5-5-3 ratio, is met.

Breasted Dies; Pharaoh Tomb 'Curse' Derided

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—Dr. James H. Breasted, famed Egyptologist who exposed himself to the so-called "curse" upon violators of a Pharaoh's tomb, died today of a blood infection.

He was taken off the liner Conte di Savoia last Thursday and speeded to Presbyterian Hospital, suffering, a ship's doctor said, from a recurring attack of malarial fever.

Hospital officials said the 70-year-old archaeologist succumbed to a "hemolytic streptococcic infection."

He had derided several times the force of a curse reportedly found by scientific diggers in the tomb of King Tutankhamen.

Death Prophecy.

Inscribed on the walls of the crypt, the superstition runs, were these words:

"Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of the Pharaoh."

Of the 22 who first looked on the inscription after the tomb's seal was broken in 1922, seven have died.

The Earl of Carnarvon, who sponsored the work that led to discovery of the crypt, was the first to die, early in 1923, and the "curse" superstition was blamed by some.

Others who followed in death were Sir William Garstin, Sir Charles Cust, Arthur E. P. B. Weigall, Prince Ali Fahmy Bey, Arthur H. Mace, assistant curator of the Methopolitan Museum, and Prof. Breasted.

Dr. Breasted once called the curse "tommyrot."

Native of Illinois.

As before, scientists joined today to scoff at hints of the supernatural in Dr. Breasted's death.

Three doctors who treated Dr. Breasted announced that "the fatal infection was definitely incurred while Dr. Breasted was en route homeward from a journey to the Near East, upon which he and Mrs. Breasted embarked last August. Treatment was immediately administered for relief of malaria, which disappeared, but the streptococcic infection—one very well known to medical science—proved fatal."

France Reported As Backing Stand

'Common Policy' Agreed Upon; Procedure Is Already Formed.

The Crisis Abroad.

The British cabinet decided to proceed with plans for an oil embargo against Italy and to bolster national defenses.

Premier Mussolini was reported to have expressed the hope that the United States and Canada will refuse to listen to Britain's appeals for an oil embargo.

Indications that a possibly decisive battle in Africa is imminent were seen in a report in Addis Ababa that 400,000 Ethiopian soldiers were massed against the Italians in northern Ethiopia.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, Dec. 2.—The British cabinet today decided to proceed with plans for an oil embargo against Italy in defiance of Premier Benito Mussolini's reported warlike threats.

The decision was reached in a momentous session at No. 10 Downing street during which full consideration was given to Il Duce's hint that a league oil blockade would be considered a military sanction.

Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and League Secretary Capt. Anthony Eden reportedly argued that choking off the flow of oil to the Italian military machine would tend to hasten Mussolini's submission to the League's Italo-Ethiopian peace terms.

France and Britain already have agreed upon a common policy in favor of the oil embargo, which will be considered by the League "sanctions general staff" of 18 at a meeting December 12, it was learned.

Certain arrangements to effect oil sanctions already have been made by the British in anticipation of League approval.

[Immediate reorganization of antiaircraft defenses in the London area was announced, according to the Associated Press. An entire division of four antiaircraft groups was formed and charged with the defense of the city against any assault from the skies. Each of the four groups within the division is larger than an infantry brigade. Each will have headquarters where it can best co-operate with the Royal Air Force, itself recently expanded.—Editor's note.]

Early Action Due.

Eden, who will represent Britain, at the committee of 18 meeting, is expected to press for an early beginning of the petroleum embargo.

Canada's disavowal of her delegate's initiative in proposing the extension of sanctions to Italy's military necessities failed to budge Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's cabinet, any more than Il Duce's menacing attitude.

Diplomats were informed that the cabinet approved continued preparation of Britain's land, sea and air forces for "all contingencies," especially possible Italian military reprisals.

The official reason for the cabinet meeting was to hear the speech which King George will deliver at the opening of Parliament Tuesday. As soon as Baldlwin called the meeting to order, Hoare and Eden began argument in favor of a fuel blockade against Italy.

The possible dangers of such action were debated at length. The ministers also discussed Sir Samuel's prospective visit to French Premier Pierre Laval Saturday at which diplomatic negotiations for ending the Italo-Ethiopian conflict may be advanced.

The foreign secretary has been ordered by his doctors to take a complete rest. En route to Switzerland, he will stop in Paris to talk with Laval—middleman in the effort to compose Italian and British differences over what constitutes a fair settlement in East Africa.

During Sir Samuel's absence, Eden will be acting foreign secretary.

The cabinet was reported to have

Liquor Store Holdup Victims Lose Pants, Poise and $360

Not only were four men required to surrender nearly $350 in cash and valuables in a holdup of the Larimer liquor store at 1737 Connecticut avenue last night, but the three colored gunmen made them remove their trousers in the presence of a woman.

The woman was Mrs. Helen M. Dowden, pretty 26-year-old daughter of Casius S. Larimer, proprietor of the store. She was required to take off her shoes when the men were made to remove their trousers.

Bernard F. Kelly, 32, of 1225 Michigan avenue northeast, the manager of the store; Wellington Abrams, 1530 I street northwest, and Mrs. Dowden were in the store when two of the gunmen sauntered in waving pistols. An armed confederate stood guard at the entrance. One of the robbers spoke calmly.

"Be quiet. Act as if nothing was going on. This is a holdup. But don't raise your hands. Just walk to the rear and keep quiet."

At the rear of the store Kelly, Abrams and Mrs. Dowden were soon joined by Andrew J. Dawson, 24, of 714 Tewksbury place northwest, the store delivery man, and Robert Malone, of the Shoreham Hotel, a customer who came in after the holdup got under way.

The men were compelled to take off their trousers to make it easier for the gunmen to go through them for cash and valuables.

Teachers Strike for Back Pay; Schools Closed to 2,000 Pupils

By the Associated Press.

Bay St. Louis, Miss., Dec. 2.—Classrooms were closed to approximately 2,000 rural pupils in Hancock County today as their teachers struck over delinquent pay.

Some 50 instructors joined 35 bus drivers and transportation men in the action.

With salaries several months in arrears and pay certificates devalued to the worth of a "scrap of paper," the county school teachers warned the board of supervisors last week they could carry on no longer. They insisted they were without money with which to meet the bare necessities of life.

The threat was carried out today and a forced vacation made school days "school-less" ones for the rural pupils.

Exceptions in the closing were the municipal schools of Bay St. Louis and Waveland and the Clermont Harbor and Edwardsville schools, where either salaries were not in arrears or State funds for the first four months of the year had not been exhausted.

The teachers said that because of financial stress when their contracts were signed no set salaries were written in, but that even on that score they had not been paid for the latter part of last session and the three months of this year.

Their spokesmen demanded some arrangement for the payment of past-due salaries and assurance that they would be paid 50 per cent of current salaries before they would return to work.

Roosevelt Tour Shows U. S. Aid In Rural Areas

A Staff Correspondent.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 2.—In his Atlanta speech Friday, President Roosevelt offered to take the "gentlemen in well-warmed and well-stocked clubs" who are criticising him, "out on the battle line of human necessity," and show them what the Government is facing and what it is doing.

President Roosevelt in a sense did that today when he led a party of newspaper correspondents and a few personal friends over 20 miles of treacherous mountain roads to witness what has been done at the Pine Mountain Valley organized rural community, a Federal resettlement project.

The President hailed this project as an "experiment" in rural resettlement and as "an example" of what can be done to improve the standard of rural life generally and the living conditions of persons unable to cope with urban life on submarginal land. In a talk to the settlers he called the project "a dream come true."

Model Community.

The Presidential party found, on what was formerly scrub timberland covering a small mountain side, a neatly laid-out rural community of 11,700 acres, now dotted with small but attractive and freshly painted one-story frame cottages, each occupied by a family with one or more children.

Surrounding each cottage is approximately 13 acres of arable land, suitable for fruit and vegetable farming or poultry raising. Each cottage has electricity and wide, but unimproved, roads, knitted through the community.

Nearby similar cottages were being erected, also a large schoolhouse, a warehouse and a large building destined to be a processing plant for the products of this community. By next July cottages and farming plots will be ready for a total of about 260 families, including the 70 which have already moved in.

The settlers who have taken houses in this community came from nearby cities or farms on which they found it difficult to eke out a living. Those from the cities had farming backgrounds, an aptitude for that kind of life and a desire to return to the land.

Aspects of Scheme.

The program contemplates the settlers raising all their own food and in addition sufficient foodstuffs, which when processed and shipped to the cities, will bring them cash to buy clothing, other necessities of life and to pay back to the Government the cost of this project.

There is no doubt that most, if not all of these people, are living in better homes than they have occupied before. They seemed a well-fed, happy, if over-awed group of farm folks when the President addressed them today. Except for the arithmetic of the scheme, the project appears laudable from all viewpoints.

This project was started by the FERA a year ago and is now under the supervision of the WPA, represented in this State by Miss Gay B. Shepperson. The sum of $1,125,000 has been allocated for the completed project. It is estimated here that about $500,000 already has been spent. The land cost an average of $10 an acre.

Whether the 270 families which eventually will constitute the community will ever be able to pay back the Government the cost of the project, even though they are charged only nominal interest and administrative fees, seems highly dubious. The houses may be in ruins before they are paid for. This is an aspect of the matter only touched indirectly by the President.

Mr. Roosevelt told the settlers grouped about his automobile that in the United States there were a million or more families who, like them, deserve better living conditions.

"Cannot Do It For All."

"But we cannot do this for all of them," he asserted. "There is not enough money in the Treasury to do it. But the Government can set the example not only to help those who are here but the tens of thousands who have a right to help who are not here."

He went on to say that much depended on the success of "this experiment" and that its success depended on the care with which the Government planned the project. He expressed the hope that other projects might follow this one and that each in turn might be constructed more cheaply than its predecessors.

He praised the co-operation of the county authorities, which he said he believed would find its counterpart elsewhere in the country, and pointed out to the settlers that an obligation rested on them of "making good" in order that encouragement might be given for similar projects elsewhere.

"We and our ancestors," asserted the President, "took a lot out of the land here.

"A tremendous amount can be done with this country," the President asserted. "We and our ancestors took a lot out of it and gave little back. We took the soil and timber without thought of preserving them. So, in a sense, we are atoning here for the sins of our fathers.

"It will take a long time—two or three generations—before rural life in America is brought up to the level we want it. But here we have made a start. Such projects as this will not only help this country get on its feet, but help it to stay on its feet."

The President was roundly cheered by the overalled men and gingham-dressed women who listened to him, in effect, dedicate their homesteads. Addresses of welcome, appreciation and promises of achievement were made by local officials.

Roscoe Eubanks, chairman of the Settlers' Council, said that "in the heart of forgotten men new hopes, new courage and determination have been born. Our labors in this new land of promise will demonstrate our gratitude from year to year."

"Uncle Henry" Kimbrouck, of Chipley, a county leader and member of the State forestry board, told Mr. Roosevelt that Mrs. Kimbrouck had written a speech for him, "but I just want to talk to you from the bottom of my heart."

"There used to be just a few old houses and mules hereabouts," he observed. "It's hard to believe what has been done.

"I never have found one person here who is not satisfied, these men never leave anything undone. They are the best farmers in Georgia.

"This is the greatest proposition in the United States. You will never know how much good you have done humanity."

Mr. Roosevelt after riding around the community and viewing it from "Tip Top," a nearby mountain abutment, went to the home of Cason Calloway, La Grange, Ga., mill owner, to spend the night. Calloway is a trustee of the Warm Springs Foundation.

Mr. Roosevelt drove his own automobile, entirely hand-controlled, to the resettlement community and to the Calloway home, the Secret Service men following in a big open car, over roads which rose and fell at steep grades and sharp angles.

Europe Again Tempts Uncle Sam; Neutrality Issue and Messiah Role; Remember Wilson.

By Raymond Clapper

UNCLE SAM, cast by Europe for so many post-war years in the role of Uncle Shylock, is now being beseeched to change back into the familiar Messiah role.

Typical of the beguiling appeals to us is that of Emil Ludwig, the distinguished biographer, who has brought Napoleon and other figures of modern Europe back to life for thousands of delighted readers. He is winning applause from his American lecture audiences by telling them that the fate of Europe is in America's hands. The United States can save the world again by joining the League of Nations.

The offer of the Messiah role also takes another and more insidious form. We are being told that we ought to join League powers in applying sanctions.

That question is coming up with the return of Congress next month. The so-called neutrality act expires February 29. The Administration, aided by many influences, is expected to seek discretionary power in the use of the embargo as between belligerents. That is purely a disguised attempt to give the President power to join the League in applying sanctions.

The justification advanced for this is that by such discriminatory use of embargo power, we can munition the right side and help starve out the wrong side. In this way, we are told, the United States can force peace in the world.

Such talk makes a dangerous appeal to national vanity. It is the same kind of appeal Europe used on Woodrow Wilson. He was ostensibly given the role of peace-maker in Europe, and was graciously allowed to spend thousands of lives and billions of dollars trying to be a Messiah. It is a tempting role for another President until you remember what they did to Wilson as soon as they no longer needed him.

We are an egotistical people indeed if we still believe that the United States can bring peace to Europe, after the mess they have made of their continent during almost 20 post-war years.

Europe is preparing for the next war now. It will require the most careful handling of loose matches to prevent the tinder laid by the Italian-Ethiopian conflict from being ignited.

Almost everyone is pessimistic about the London naval conference which begins this week. Its purpose is to explore the possibility of continuing the principle of naval limitation adopted at the Washington arms conference in 1921. Even while the American delegates are on their way to London, Secretary of Navy Swanson issues his annual report saying that the outlook for continued limitation is uncertain. England wants the restrictions loosened up. So does Japan.

The Washington arms conference was significant chiefly because it made a start. It stopped the building of expensive battleships and gave nations weighed with war debts a breathing spell.

The theory was that having established the principle, the navies of the world would be steadily contracted, preserving the existing ratios of strength. Now the powers are ready to build again. They see a war coming and want to be footloose. Thus, apparently, the one start that had been made toward checking dangerous naval rivalries is about to be abandoned.

Remember also that the allies disarmed Germany with a pledge that they too would disarm as soon as they could get around to it. They haven't got around to it.

If post-war Europe has been able to make no more headway toward composing its differences than it has since the United States stepped in and finished off one war to end war, what is the incentive to try it again? How about Europe's saving itself, for a change?

But it is said that we must get into European politics so that we will be in better position to restrain Japan in the Far East. Are we going to be the messiah for Asia, too?

Finally, it is said that we cannot keep out of another general war. There is no reason to assume that. It would cost us money—in trade—to keep out, but probably no more than the last war cost us. Certainly it would not cost as many lives.

Geography has given us our greatest security. We can, if we have to, live within ourselves. In fact the Republican Party, with its Hawley-Smoot tariff, tried its best to force us to do that when there was no need to.

Many people assume that political isolation means economic isolation. Probably so during a period of general war. But not normally. We can go on making trade treaties such as the Canadian pact and break down mutual barriers without mixing into foreign politics. We do not meddle in Canadian politics, yet we are abandoning our comparative economic isolation with the Dominion. In order to trade with Europe in normal times is it necessary also to go over and be their political umpire, and if the game degenerates into a fight, also serve as their policeman?

These questions are no longer academic. They are the hard-bitten issues that are involved in the coming fight in Congress over neutrality legislation.

The arguments of the political interventionists will be the more persuasive because they will be dressed in the raiment of idealism as they were from 1914 to 1917. They wil be set to the tune of siren music. And it will take some sturdy leaders with their feet firmly on the ground to make convincing answer.

Senator Carey, of Wyoming, a Republican and a large cattle man, predicted disaster for the cattle industry as a result of the Canadian trade agreement. The next day he went out and bought 500 head of feeder cattle out of which he expects to make a neat profit. He probably merely wanted to show that he could rise above principle.

Judge Declares Repeal A Boon to Bootleggers

Kansas City, Kans., Dec. 2 (AP).—Federal Judge Richard J. Hopkins, in charging a grand jury today, said repeal of the eighteenth amendment appears to have increased bootlegging to a scale "heretofore unknown."

"It was assumed for a time repeal would dispose of so-called liquor cases in Federal courts," the judge said. "This appears to have been a grossly mistaken idea. Repeal, so far as we are able to discern at this time, appears to have increased the ownership and operation of illicit stills, the unlawful manufacture of liquor and bootlegging to a scale heretofore unknown."

Banks Snap Up $900,000,000 Treasury Issue

U. S. Debt Reaches New High as Offering Is Sold Out on First Day.

By Robert C. Albright.

"Substantial" oversubscription of the Government's new $900,000,000 security issues was announced last night by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., as the Treasury closed its books to further offers.

Carrying the public debt beyond $30,000,000,000 for the first time in history, both the $450,000,000 2¾ per cent issue of Treasury bonds and the $450,000,000 in 1½ per cent Treasury notes, were completely sold out the first day they were offered, the Treasury said.

Secretary Morgenthau expressed his "gratification and delight" with the success of the venture, which marked a temporary abandonment of the recent "auction system" of marketing Treasury bonds.

Oversubscription of the huge issue, however, did not come as a surprise to the banking profession, spokesmen for which previously had predicted it would be absorbed without difficulty.

Part of a $1,318,000,000 financing operation, the $900,000,000 issues of bonds and notes was capped by an offer to exchange either for $418,000,000 in 2½ per cent notes maturing December 15. Subscription books will be kept open "until further notice" for exchange purposes only.

Funds to Finance Relief.

The Government plans to use the $900,000,000 in new cash for meeting relief and other emergency expenses during the winter. No further important financing is expected until March. Pleased with yesterday's immediate response by the banks, Treasury officials indicated they would make only limited use of the "auction" method of marketing securities in the future.

The exact amount of cash subscriptions, and the bases of allotment, were not disclosed by the Treasury, which pointed out that cash subscriptions for either issue placed in the mail before midnight "will be considered as having been entered before the close of the subscription books." Accurate estimates of the volume of these was impossible last night.

The all-time high of $30,541,606,134 in the public debt brought about by the new financing, compares with a high of $25,482,000,000 at the close of the World War. Of the present total, $9,500,000,000 was added by the Roosevelt Administration.

The $900,000,000 in new security issues, the bonds carrying a 10-year maturity, and the notes, 5 years, apparently had little effect on the Government bond market. Some issues sold slightly lower, but this was not generally attributed to the new offering.

Cash Reserves at New High.

Subscriptions to the new issue by the banks, which in the last fiscal year purchased more than 90 per cent of Federal offerings to finance the deficit, will carry bank holdings of "Governments" to a new level. Bank holdings of Federal securities have more than doubled since 1929, and are expected to stand at around $16,000,000,000 at the close of this year.

Cash reserves of member Federal Reserve banks are now the highest in history, and many quarters attributed yesterday's quick oversubscription of the new Government issues to this cash surplus.

Discussing the recent bullish trend of the stock market, Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, in an interview yesterday hailed it as a "healthy sign" and declared the country is "in no danger of another boom like that of 1929."

Market Trend Normal.

"We now have the machinery necessary to check it if we need to," Fletcher said. "But there is nothing in the present trend paralleling the '29 stock market climb and I view it as a normal and healthy development."

Fletcher said safeguards set up in the securities act and in the banking acts of 1933 and 1935 carried "adequate" safeguards. He said no new banking legislation of a major nature will be considered by his committee this session.

Middle-West Accent Upheld Against East

Kansas City, Dec. 2 (AP).—College professors hustled tonight to defend the Midwest accent—likened to the whir of a vacuum cleaner by a Harvard educator—and scoffed at the "nasal tricks" New Englanders turn with the English language.

At Harvard University, of all places, they are making a study of accents. Prof. Harry H. Hall 'photographed" the voice of Prof. Miles L. Hanley, of the University of Wisconsin, and classed his pronunciation of the letter "S" as "random noise." A vacuum cleaner gets the same rating.

The test brought nothing but jeers from Midwestern college professors. They defended their geographical accent as far more soothing to the ear than that of the "Down Easter."

Prof. H. Miles Heberer, head of the public speaking department at Kansas State College, declared Kansas conversation is "considerably easier to understand generally than the speech of New Englanders."

be necessary to extend the PWA deadline until a later date to give contractors an opportunity to make preparations and to assure receipt of acceptable bids. In some communities it has been reported that there is not enough available equipment to start the jobs.

At WPA headquarters it was reported that few complaints have come from States as a result of the ending of the dole, although reports from the States themselves indicate that many are not prepared to assume the burden.

Preliminary work of the WPA now has been virtually completed. The task from now on is that of keeping men at work and of equalizing relief quotas. Although theoretically the quotas were to take care of all the employables on relief roles, some States, notably Alabama and Indiana, have reported that they have more than their quotas employed, while other communities are under their quotas.

It is expected that employes will be cut from the rolls in communities over their quotas and added in those that are under. The burden of caring for employes removed from the rolls will rest on the States.

Meanwhile, Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, will resume today his speaking campaign designed to "sell" the relief program. He will speak at Washington University in St. Louis tonight. Tomorrow he will attend a conference of relief officials at Chicago and tomororw night he will speak at Kalamazoo, Mich. He also has a tentative speaking engagement at Grand Rapids. He will speak next Monday at Philadelphia. Secretary Ickes will speak at Detroit tomorrow night.

Relief Administration Disbanded in Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., Dec. 2 (AP).—Following the lead of the Federal Government in abandoning the dole, Gov. Philip F. LaFollette today announced the immediate liquidation of the Wisconsin emergency relief administration.

Some $2,600,000 of funds which the WERA had left over at the end of November will be apportioned at once among the State's 71 counties. They will receive no State relief aid, the Governor said.

Cotton Growers Offered 4-Year AAA Contracts

New Two-Year Corn-Hog Reduction Program Also Announced.

By the Associated Press.

The AAA last night offered the Nation's cotton growers a four-year adjustment contract, aimed at crop reduction and at bettering the lot of share-croppers and some tenant farmers through increased payments to them.

Pointed toward a 11,000,000 to 12,000,000-bale production in 1936, the 1936-1939 contracts call for a 5 to 10 per cent greater crop reduction than in 1935, with a 1,000,000 acre reduction in base acreage.

A few hours earlier, the Farm Administration had made public details of a two-year adjustment program for corn-hog producers intended to increase next year's hog production by 30 per cent.

Both long-range control agreements were projected in the face of the impending Supreme Court decision on AAA's constitutionality. Four-year contracts also have been prepared for wheat, tobacco and rye producers.

High Administration quarters have indicated some way would be sought to continue production control in these major crops even should the high tribunal hold processing taxes invalid. Benefit payments to farmers are financed through these taxes.

The major changes in the new cotton contracts:

1. They cover four years instead of one.

2. National base acreage is reduced from 45,500,000 to 44,500,000 acres.

3. The reduced production for 1936 must be 30 to 45 per cent of the base, compared with 25 to 35 per cent in 1935, and 35 to 45 per cent in 1934.

4. Benefits equal to 5 cents a pound, or $8.60 an acre, will be paid in one check for the reductions. Three payments were made on two bases, totaling 4¾ cents a pound.

5. Share croppers will receive 25 per cent of the payments instead of the 15 per cent they now get; nonmanaging share-tenants 50 per cent instead of 22½ per cent, and managing share-tenants 50 per cent instead of 57½ per cent.

Definitions of Classes.

The AAA explained that share-croppers are those who furnish labor only and share a half-interest in the crop with landlords; nonmanaging tenants are those who furnish work stock and equipment, but not production supervision, while managing tenants are those who supervise production as well as provide stock and equipment.

In addition, their share of adjustment checks will be paid directly to tenants "in normal cases," the AAA explaining this "provision may operate for the protection of both landlords and tenant."

The AAA's announcement said that despite a reduction of 8,500,000 bales through the "plow-up" campaign and current reduction programs, the world carry-over of American cotton last August 1 was around 9,000,000 bales — 3,000,000 bales larger than the average annul carryover in the ten-year period ending in 1932-33, but 4,000,000 bales less than the record 13,000,000-bale carry over in 1932.

Davis Explains Move.

"We have taken into account the unique position which cotton holds in our national life," said Administrator Chester A. Davis in announcing the contracts. "Our primary concern is the welfare of the producer. We believe that while benefitting him primarily, the program will also be of great benefit to the South and the country as a whole."

"We feel also that we have in the last three years passed well beyond the emergency which necessitated the plow-up campaign in 1933. Our policy consequently aims at the adjustment of the supply of cotton through, as the agricultural adjustment act expresses it, a 'gradual correction of the present inequalities.'"

The 1935 cotton program was designed for a crop of 11,500,000 bales. The last official crop estimate placed production at 11,141,000 bales. A considerably larger crop had been expected before adverse weather hit some sections of the belt, and officials indicated privately they would prefer to see a crop close to 11,000,000 bales in 1936.

This year 14,000,000 acres were taken out of cotton production. The estimated cost of 1935 benefit payments was $125,000,000. In 1934, 14,550,000 acres were taken out of production at a cost of $111,800,000, and in 1933, $112,550,000 was spent to take 10,000,000 acres out of production.

Officials declined to estimate either the number of acres which might be retired next year or the probable cost of the program.

Projecting its first two-year corn-hog contract, the AAA announced plans for a series of meetings to put the new program into effect.

State meetings will be held throughout the corn belt this month, the AAA announced, where the new contract will be explained to State corn-hog officials, extension service representatives and field supervisors. Regional meetings will be held outside the corn belt.

Too Great Cut Feared.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 2 (U.P.).—The cotton trade feared tonight that the Government's new adjustment program might lead to an over-reduction of the American crop.

With consumption increasing, due chiefly to a boom in foreign exports, some observers believed the United States will have a market for 2,000,000 more bales of cotton than it produced this season and will have to dig into the dwindling surplus which was 9,000,000 bales at the beginning of the season, August 1.

It was agreed, however, that the AAA program for 1936 will be a boon to a million sharecroppers who will get 25 per cent of the benefit payments in 1936, whereas they have been getting practically nothing.

Chief of Bureau Hails New Label For Coats, Suits

By the Associated Press.

A ghost of the old Blue Eagle—a new label for ladies' coats and suits—was hailed yesterday by Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Federal Women's Bureau, as a possible "great stabilizing factor" in trade.

It is an NRA aftermath, the first "consumers' protective label" by voluntary agreement, bearing the seal of the national recovery board of the coat and suit industry, and the words "manufactured under fair labor standards."

Miss Anderson said that, whereas women in general purchased about 80 per cent of consumers' goods, they purchase 100 per cent of ladies' coats and suits, so the fate of these labels is literally up to the women.

She sent a memorandum around to her own staff asking those about to purchase coats or suits to ask for the label and voiced a profound hope the women of the country would do the same.

"Industry Does Part."

"The industry has done its part," she said. "I am told that over 90 per cent of the employers belong to the association which agreed upon the label, and over 50 per cent of them are using it.

"The workers have done their part. The union of that industry, where 60,000 men and women workers are employed, have agreed with the employers on the fair hours and working conditions for which it stands. It means that the trade union agreement is being enforced and lived up to.

"Now, it is up to the consumers. If it is a success in the coat and suit industry, then it will be extended to dresses and other divisions in the ap rel trade."

NRA Label Eliminated.

The Supreme Court decision ending NRA codes eliminated NRA labels from 17 indsutries which may now be regarded as the possible field for labels by voluntary trade agreements co-operated in by both employers and employes.

They included: Blouse and skirt, cotton garment, knitted underwear, men's clothing and robes and allied products.

"What these labels actually did for industry can be seen by every casual shopper," said Miss Anderson. "There's all the difference in the world between display windows before the codes and now. Then they were flooded with cheap goods that would hardly hang together, the market was so demoralized by cut-throat competition. The standard is far higher now."

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 2.—Ethiopia soon will hurl an army of 400,000 warriors against Italians entrenched in the north, it was indicated today.

Unofficial reports said the first major offensive may take place at dawn tomorrow.

Tribesmen are known to be rallying for a northern drive, now that Emperor Haile Salessie has established a general military headquarters at Dessye.

The Negus, it was said, is believed to be preparing to go northward to meet his chief leaders in that area, Ras Seyoum and Ras Kassa. Their combined forces will then take the offensive, it was said.

Belief was expressed here that since tomorrow is the monthly day of the Patron St. George, the Ethiopians may choose this time to attack.

The armies of Seyoum and Kassa were said to be in connection at Amba Alaji, south of Makale, and Ras Mulugheta is believed to have reached there with reinforcements.

Another Ethiopian army, of from 30,000 to 40,000 men, was reported gathering in the south near Dolo. Light rains are continuing in that area, although Ethiopia's rainy season has been over for two months.

One of Il Duce's native troop columns reported today it had come through a sharp battle in the Tembien Mountains.

The native troop column reported Ethiopian forces under Ras Seyoum had ambushed them as they "were cleaning up" near Alemale Pass.

The Italian column, consisting of a native battalion commanded by white officers, was proceeding slowly and cautiously over mountain terrain at the time of the ambush.

When the column entered a valley the advance guard was suddenly stopped by a fusilade of bullets from a mountain ridge just ahead.

The whole column halted and deployed in battle formation, the men concealing themselves as best they could behind rocks and trees.

The battle continued for several hours, with the Italians gradually working up the valley toward the crest of the mountain. A final charge dislodged the Ethiopians, forcing them to flee.

Mellon, nephew of Andrew Mellon, went to Virginia on business.

The commissioners, including attorneys general of 14 States and representatives of more than a score of others, left to the council of State governors, headed by Henry W. Toll, of Colorado, executive director, the drive for passage of the measures by legislatures.

The commission indorsed measures which would provide uniform rules of extradition.

Nanking Offers Near Autonomy To North China

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Dec. 2.—The Chinese National government has decided to give North China a virtual autonomy in a move to prevent creation of "another Manchukuo," an authoritative source said tonight.

Administration of the northern provinces will be radically changed.

Nanking, it was said, will grant wider governmental powers and sharply curtail the operation of its new monetary measures in the north. Japanese especially had objected to the new financial program.

The opinion was expressed in official Japanese quarters that the proposals have a good chance to succeed "if the autonomy movement has not gained too much momentum."

Japanese apparently were divided on the issue. Diplomats and moderate army officers were represented as favoring the Nanking program, but the army officers on the scene as reluctant to give up the plan for absolute autonomy.

In informed circles it was said the far-reaching new program concerning North China's many millions was adopted at a conference between Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and other Nanking leaders.

Americans' Safety Sought.

Nanking, Dec. 2 (AP).The United States embassy tonight asked the Chinese government to provide protection for 17 American missionaries caught in the path of a communist advance across Hunan Province. The Chinese communists are retreating across Hunan Province in face of an advance of federal troops.

A few American missionaries already have reached Chingteh, Hunan Province.

Union City, N. J., Dec. 2 (AP).—Word of the advance of Chinese communists in Hunan Province was received at the American head qquarters of the Passionist fathers, St. Michael's Monastery, in the following cablegram:

"Reds broke through. Supu Chenki reported taken. Advancing to Chinkiang. City prepared for seige. Fathers, sisters, impossible evacuate."

The message was sent yesterday and was signed by the Very Rev. William Westhoven, forerly of Chicago.

The monastery said there are 29 Passionist fathers in Hunan, and 15 nuns. The latter are Sisters of Charity from Convent, N. J., and Sisters of St. Joseph, from Baden. Pa.

Dock Strikers Cargo Boycott Goes in Effect

Gulf Port Longshoremen Seek to Force Union Recognition.

By the United Press.

New York (Tuesday), Dec. 3.—A Nation-wide boycott by the International Longshoremen's Association against cargoes from Gulf of Mexico ports became effective last midnight as the union acted drastically in an effort to bring recognition of the I. L. A. in 19 Southern ports.

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the union, announced the boycott. He said that if the 25 American and foreign deep-sea and coastwise lines involved in the controversy over union recognition do not sign agreements with the I. L. A. at Gulf ports, union dockworkers at east and west ports will refuse to handle the companies' vessels used elsewhere than in the Gulf trade.

However, Ryan expressed hope that the boycott will not last long. It was reported that several companies with headquarters here telegraphed Southern representatives to sign with the I. L. A. immediately to escape the boycott.

The union's fight for recognition in the South has resulted in battles between pickets and strikebreakers at several Gulf ports in recent weeks in which several men have been killed and many injured.

Britain to Push Embargo on Oil Despite Threat

considered suggestions that oil sanctions might be delayed if Mussolini agreed to halt hostilities in Ethiopia and reopen negotiation with France and Britain on the basis of "reasonable conditons."

It was reported without confirmation that the cabinet studied Italy's latest terms for ending the war, which are:

1. Cession to Italy of a wide strip of territory linking the Italian colonies of Eritrea in the north and Somaliland in the south by way of Aussa, Hara and Ogaden.

2. Italian annexation of the Ethiopian districts of Bale, Boran and Kafa.

The cabinet was understood to favor the last proposal in part, agreeing to annexation of Boran and Bale if Emperor Haile Selassie also assents ,but objecting to surrender of the Kafa area because it adjoins Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Final decision on these matters was postponed until fate of Laval's government is determined in the French Chamber of Deputies Tuesday.

The consensus of cabinet members was reported to favor continued pressure upon Mussolini for new proposals offering a more fruitful basis of discussion. If these are not forthcoming before December 12, the oil embargo will be started in an attempt to soften Il Duce's resistance.

Letter by Peek Bares Attempt To Quit in July

Johnson and Lewis W. Douglas, as an open critic of the New Deal. Originally a Republican, he served under Woodrow Wilson as a member of the War Industries Board. In 1928 he took up the Democratic cause as head of the Alfred E. Smith Independent Organization Committee. Four years later he became a leader of the Roosevelt forces in the farm belt.

Formation of the first Export-Import bank was completed in February, 1934, and Peek became president. The first organization was set up as a result of the Soviet recognition agreement. It was financed with RFC funds for the purpose of discounting obligations of foreign countries given to American exporters. Later a second bank for trade with Cuba, and a third bank for trade with other countries were organized. The first bank has not functioned as actively as anticipated because of the failure of a large trade with the Soviet Republics to materialize.

Technically, Peek's position as foreign trade adviser to the President expired July 16, the date on which the original National Industrial Recovery Act expired. His original letter of resignation, which he was dissuaded from sending, coincided with this event.

Peek's principal differences with the Administration trade policies arose from the fact that while he favored negotiating trade agreements with foreign countries, he disapproved the policy of granting similar reductions to other countries under the most-favored-nation plan. He has never made a secret of his attitude, writing and speaking in opposition to the Administration policy.

Meanwhile, the State Department announced that President Roosevelt had formally proclaimed the reciprocal trade agreements with Brazil and Canada, both to become effective January 1. Formal ratifications of the Brazilian treaty, signed February 2, took place yesterday at Rio de Janeiro.

The Brazilian agreement continues free entry of coffee from that country, grants a 50 per cent reduction in the United States tariff on Brazilian manganese and provides tariff concessions on a number of products manufactured in the United States. Other trade agreements have been made with Cuba, Haiti, Belgium, Colombia and Sweden. The Colombian pact has not yet been ratified by that country.

Hearings Begin Today on 1936 Appropriations

Sub-Committee Chairmen Say They 'Will Cut Where They Can.'

By the Associated Press.

Insisting that "cut where we can" was their watchward, chairmen of two House Appropriations sub-committees rolled up their sleeves last night for work on the Government's 1936 money bills.

The sub-committees will begin hearings and other studies today on the independent offices supply and Treasury-Postoffice bills.

"We are going to keep well within the budget and cut where we can," said Chairman Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, of the sub-committee for the independent office bill.

Woodrum indorsed the objective of Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, of the full committee, to "balance the ordinary budget outside of emergency expenditures."

Chairman Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, of the sub-committee for the Treasury-Postoffice Department bill, said there would be economy wherever possible."

Woodrum declared that "I don't think it will be necessary to impose new taxes if we can balance the regular budget," coupling this with expression of a belief the regular budget's "small deficit can be wiped out and that it can be made to balance even with several new customers."

The Treasury-Postoffice bill as passed last session totaled $903,835,678, an increase over the $901,420,053 budget estimate. The independent office measure was reduced from the $777,617,462 budget figure to $777,501,956.

Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat-, of Oklahoma, said he did not agree with Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, of the committee, that CCC activities should be curtailed, and said he would like to see "both the number of projects and the number of men working on them doubled" in Oklahoma.

Italian Embassy Denies War Bombing Reports

By the Associated Press.

The Italian Embassy issued the following statement yesterday:

"Many reports have recently been published by the press on alleged defeats of the Italian armies in east Africa and bombardments by air of defenseless Ethiopian villages, with consequent deaths of women and children.

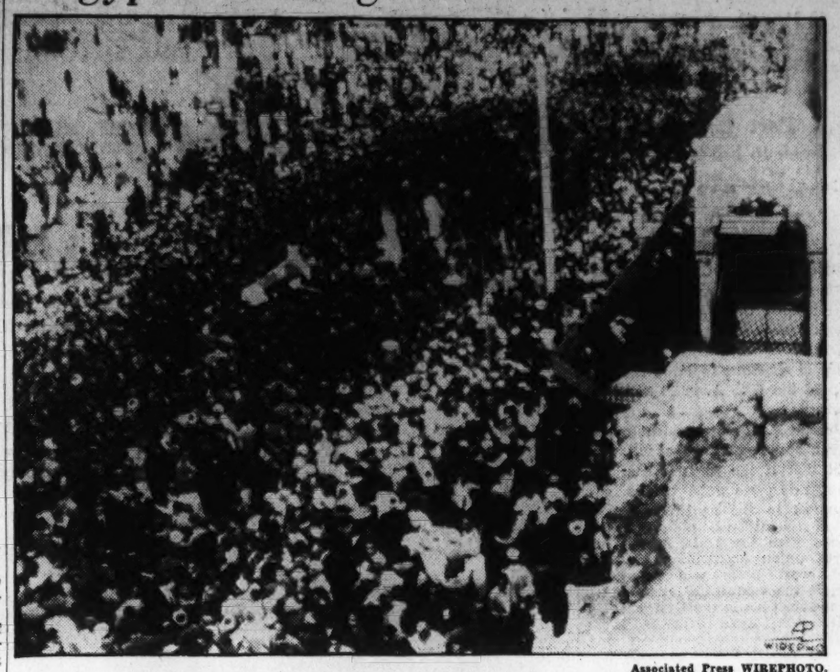
"The Italian Embassy in Washington is authorized by its government to strongly deny such reports, which can only be originated by a willful desire of stirring anti-Italian feelings."

Court Delays Trial Of Busby Berkeley

Los Angeles, Dec. 2 (AP).—A crowded court calendar forced postponement today for one week of the trial of Busby Berkeley, movie dance director.

Berkeley is charged with three counts of second-degree murder in connection with the fatal injury last September 8 of William von Brieson, his mother, Ada von Brieson, and sister-in-law, Dorothea Daley, in a three-car collision near Santa Monica.

Egyptians Throng Cairo Student's Funeral



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

More than 30,000 attended the funeral of Mohammed Abdel Hakim, student shot during recent protest outbreaks against the British in Cairo. The coffin, draped with a flag bearing the crescent and star, may be seen in center. Students last night staged further riots against rule by London.

could continue to exist, shorn of power.

Kerrl, it was stated, had tired of the spectacle of three groups fighting with each other within German Protestantism. Hence, newspapermen were told, "the councils of Brethren (confessional church organs.) may as well retire, just as the Reich's church cabinet (Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller and his coworkers) has gone to its rest."

The third group, consisting of neutrals who sided neither with Mueller nor with the confessionals, were believed by Kerrl to constitute the great majority.

They pleaded with him, he said, to put an end to church squabbles.

Kerrl declared he gave his committees two years in which to complete unification of the Protestant church.

"One organ alone can govern the church and give it spiritual leadership," said the national director of church affairs. "That organ is the Reich's church committee with its state and provincial sub-committees."

Ecuador Reports Plot To Upset Government

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Dec. 2 (AP).—The government, semiofficial sources reported today, has uncovered secret meetings of members of the Conservative Party for the alleged purpose of plotting a revolution.

Egyptian Students Attack Police In Riots Protesting British Rule

By the United Press.

"Long live the revolution! Long live Nahas, leader of the revolution!" students shouted.

"Down with Hoare (British foreign secretary who opposes Egyptian independence)" others cried.

The students were followers of Nahas Pasha, leader of the Wafd party which advocates severance of all British ties with Egypt. Although technically Britain freed Egypt from protectorate in 1923, the constitution adopted that year has been under suspension for several years.

Nearly 1,000 students and sympathizers marched through the streets, tearing down iron guards around trees as weapons to attack police.

Police dispersed the students without using their guns, which killed eight in the riots last month. A number of students were arrested after a general fight. Earlier in the day, they had fired warning shots to disperse a demonstration around the home of former Premier Mohammed Mahmud Pasha, who favors moderation in the British dispute.

U. S. Auto Registrations To Exceed 26,000,000

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 2 (AP).—The Travelers Insurance Co. estimated today that motor vehicle registrations in the United States for 1935 will approximate 26,150,000, the highest since the peak year of 1930 and about 5 per cent greater than last year.

Gasoline consumption, the company estimated, also will exceed last year's by about 6 per cent and will amount to more than 17,000,000,000 gallons. Estimates were based on reports received from more than 40 States. This year's registration, the company said, will be only the third time that the number of cars has exceeded 26,000,000.

Mussolini Pins Hopes for Oil On U.S., Canada

Premier Said to Bank Upon American Countries to Reject British Plan.

By the United Press.

Rome, Dec. 2.—Premier Benito Mussolini hopes the United States and Canada will refuse to listen to Great Britain's appeals for an oil embargo against Italy to halt the Italo-Ethiopian war, it was stated reliably tonight.

The reported decision of the British cabinet to press for early oil sanctions caused surprise and disappointment among officials here.

Commenting on unofficial reports of the British position—official dispatches had not arrived—a spokesman said:

"If true, this is another of Britain's efforts to complicate matters every time the situation appears better."

The spokesman said Canada's disavowal of sponsorship of the oil blockade and British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare's intended visit to Pars were "promising signs."

Officials feel, it is believed, that if the United States and Canada refuse co-operation, collective action to shut off Italy's oil will be impossible. Both Russia and Rumania demand co-operation of all exporting nations as a condition of participation. Except for Britain and the United States, they are the two biggest producers.

Earlier today the government spokesman had said Italy now sees no reason why the oil embargo should be considered any longer.

Sanctions Press.

Rome, Dec. 2 (AP).—Italy has begun to feel the pressure of League of Nations' economic sanctions, business leaders said tonight, and is faced with solving unemployment and credit problems.

If Italy's imports and exports—which normally are about 1,000,000,000 lire (about $80,000,000) monthly—were cut in two, these sources said, the reduction would be equivalent to the wages of nearly 1,000,000 men.

Part of this slack in employment, Fascists stated, will be taken up by an extension of the 30-hour week, and part by producing war supplies.

Small firms which manufacture for export or are dependent on foreign material may face a crisis soon unless they can turn to other work, said business experts.

Bankers expressed the opinion credits must be eased in order to tide these firms over the first few months of sanctions.

As the international boycott pressure strengthened, the women of Italy promised Premier Musolini they would build a figurative barricade of their wedding rings, from behind which they would fight sanctions.

Mothers and widows of men who died in the World War, representing all of Italy's 94 provinces, pledged that every wife and widow in Italy would put her ring in the national pot of gold.

The 900 women who will be in charge of a house-to-house "mobilization" against sanctions, fixed December 18 as "faith day," the end of the first month of the League's economic "siege." On that day they will offer their wedding rings, either at the graves of Italy's war dead or at monuments to them.

Stroke Kills Italian At 'Sanctions' Trial

Milan, Italy, Dec. 2 (AP).—Carlo Feltinelli, "lumber king of Italy," died today while being examined by a Fascist council on a charge of violating the rigid campaign for sanctions reprisal.

Feltinelli, who was a grand officer of the crown of Italy, had 800,000,000-lire investments (about $6,480,000), many of which were in his wife's name, in Swiss and Swedish banks against wooded properties in Austria, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

Summoned before the council, Feltinelli pleaded he was innocent of an accusation of realizing on his investments abroad. But government informers testified he had offered 60,000,000 lire to settle the case.

Confronted with this formal accusation, Feltinelli collapsed in his chair and died immediately. Doctors said he had suffered a heart attack.

War Profiteers Are Threatened By U. S. Probe

American Firms' Dealings Anger Bone; Planning Senate Inquiry.

By the United Press.

The threat of a full congressional inquiry into activities of American industrialists who, despite warnings by the Administration, continue to trade with Italy and Ethiopia while the two nations are at war, was raised last night by Senator Homer T. Bone (Democrat), Washington.

A member of the militant Munitions Investigating Committee, Bone made no secret of the fact that his ire has been aroused by the attitude some business men are taking toward efforts by this country to maintain strict neutrality in the Ethiopian clash.

"No Kid Gloves."

"If these greedy Americans, who show that they love dollars more than their country, do one single thing which pushes us nearer the hell of war, you may rest assured they'll be investigated by our committee," Bone told the United Press.

"Also, we won't handle them with kid gloves," he continued. "We have a fighting committee. All over this great Nation men who know war is hell and futile and women who always suffer more than anyone else are demanding that we stay at peace with the world.

"We will stay at peace. Congress will see to that. The war profiteer has had his day. He may not know it—but he has."

Forced Action.

Bone is one of the smallest men in the Senate. He weighs about 110 pounds, speaks in a high, nervous voice and is not afraid to cross lances with the chamber's sharpest tongued members. He was one of a few senators who dared verbally to "spank" the late Huey Long.

When, at the last session of Congress it appeared likely that the neutrality act would be snowed under in the last rush of business toward adjournment, Bone gained the floor. He informed startled leaders that no further legislation would be enacted until the Senate had moved to keep this Nation out of war.

Bone had not talked long before leaders realized they were faced with a well-organized filibuster and capitulated. The little Westerner and his colleagues on the committee didn't get everything they wanted, but it was a start toward a fixed goal. They will come back in January prepared to draft a much stronger neutrality act.

Facing A Flood of Cheap Whiskies and Price Reductions . . . Hunter Rye Announces A PRICE ADVANCE on January 1st.

The sales of Hunter Baltimore Rye have increased at a rate that is the talk of the liquor industry, in spite of cut-price inducements offered by Canadian Ryes. The American public is finding that whiskey must be made up to a standard, not down to a price—that cheap whiskies produced to sell at bait prices cannot satisfy the traditional American preference for really fine American Rye.

• The choice of Hunter Baltimore Rye by discriminating drinkers is due to its distinctive taste and its consistent high quality. HUNTER is a unique blend which cannot be duplicated. Its special characteristics are contributed by carefully selected Baltimore Rye whiskies, blended by a master of long experience and rare skill.

• These select whiskies are all distilled in the limestone hills of the County of Baltimore in Maryland, where a combination of favorable conditions, found nowhere else in the world, makes it possible to produce rye whiskey of surpassing excellence.

• The basic rye on which HUNTER is blended is exceptional: it was distilled under a medicinal permit before Repeal. Of this superb rye whiskey Hunter holds large stocks.

• Because of their relative scarcity, and the constantly increasing demand, high-grade Baltimore Rye whiskies now cost more. But whatever the cost, Hunter refuses to cheapen its product, to change its priceless blend. The Hunter tradition is too great an inheritance, too valuable an asset, for us to endanger by offering a product in any way inferior to that which made HUNTER America's largest-selling rye whiskey before Prohibition.

• So, to maintain the unique Hunter quality, we are forced to announce a slight advance in the price of this famous rye.

Until December 31st, 1935, the present prices of Hunter Baltimore Rye will be maintained. The new HUNTER prices are effective as of January 1st, 1936.

• We will not lower Hunter Baltimore Rye standards to meet the competition of cheap whiskies which have never measured up to the best American standards of taste and fineness.

• We pledge that Hunter quality will always justify its price.

U. S. to Deny Registering Perils Rights; Associated Gas Joins Appeals.

status in contesting the law's validity.

Additional registrations by smaller companies were being received by the SEC, despite the legal requirement to register by December 1. SEC officials indicated they might not prosecute companies coming in late. Approximately 60 companies had registered last night, but with the exception of 2 or 3 major systems, registration comprised for the most part minor holding groups. The big companies as a rule are taking the injuncting route of challenging the act's legality.

The Senate Lobby Investigating Committee meanwhile was reported to be having difficulty gathering information it seeks preliminary to renewing utility lobby hearings soon after Congress convenes.

A number of the utility groups questioned have replied that they had previously destroyed records sought by the committee, it was said in one authoritative quarter. Although the investigating group, headed by Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, has sent out nearly 5,000 questionnaires, many of the questions have not been answered to the satisfaction of the committee chairman, it was said.

The House Lobby Investigating Committee, headed by Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, which is conducting a more limited inquiry, plans to call Howard C. Hopson, chairman of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., when it resumes hearings later this month. Hopson will be questioned on his own personal income, and bank sources of utility lobby funds.

It was Hopson's firm, the A. G. & E., under questioning last session regarding alleged utility lobbying, which filed the latest injunction suit against SEC registration. A. G. & E. yesterday notified the commission of its injunction action, taken in Wilmington.

Various interpretations were placed on the Associated Gas & Electric's application to the Federal Power Commission for the right to merge Kentucky and Tennessee companies.

In ignoring the SEC, but at the same time recognizing the Federal Power Commission's sphere of authority, it was pointed out that A. G. & E. might be proceeding on the theory that the FPC section of the act was valid, but SEC's powers illegal.

'Great Bankers' Still Roosevelt's Guarded Secret

He Won't Tell Who Said U. S. Could Stand Debt of 70 Billions.

$55,000,000,000 - to -$70,000,000,000 figure.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, speaking before the Minnesota State Society here last night, said:

"I challenge the President to give to the American people the names and addresses of those bankers who told him the country could stand a national debt of $70,000,000,000."

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, had issued a similar "challenge" immediately after the President's speech.

Fish continued:

"Most of the big bankers of the country have denied making any such assertion. In fairness to them and to the public the President should clarify his remarks and identify these alleged bankers."

"This amazing statement sounds more like the viewpoint of Prof. Tugwell or Prof. Frankfurter, but not that of the banking fraternity.

"The annual interest rate, at 3 per cent, on $70,000,000,000 would be over $2,000,000,000 or approximately three times the total Government expenditures in 1916."

New York reports had mentioned Mariner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, as a possible source of the advice to the President. However, it was pointed out at the Federal Reserve Board yesterday that while Mr. Eccles had been a prominent banker in the West, he did not know Mr. Roosevelt at the time the advice was given, "the spring of 1933."

A telegraphic poll of a number of prominent bankers in various cities, seeking information on the identity of the bankers to whom the President referred, had brought slight results last night.

Keyes Asks Huge Navy To Guard British Lands

London, Dec. 2 (AP).—Sir Roger Keyes, member of Parliament and World War naval hero, demanded tonight that the British navy be made supreme in the world.

In an address Sir Roger said: "Unless our navy is supreme—and if it is materially equal it will be supreme—we shall, I believe, lose this great empire of ours."

Virginia to Refund $8 Bond In 'Diplomatic' Traffic Case

Virginia's attorney general, A. P. Staples, has ruled that agents as well as diplomats of foreign nations stationed here cannot be punished for traffic offenses.

Enclosing that opinion on diplomatic immunity, Gov. George C. Peery yesterday asked Alexandria officials to return $8 posted by Jose Gibernau, Spanish government commercial agent, of 2032 Belmont road northwest, after Gibernau had been arrested on November 10 by State Policeman R. H. Lester for passing a stop sign.

The request was turned over to officials of Alexandria Police Court, where the money had been forfeited when Gibernau failed to appear for hearing. They said yesterday that Judge James Reece Duncan would probably order the money refunded when he returns this morning.

Latest in a series of diplomatic traffic tribulations, this development followed last week's expression of State Department regrets after Ghaffar Khan Djalal, Iranian Minister, was arrested charged with speeding in Elkton, Md.

Gibernau's eligibility for immunity had been questioned by the Virginia police because of his status as a commercial agent, rather than an embassy officer. One Alexandria official said yesterday that he probably would have been freed if he had appeared in court, but added, commenting on doubtful cases:

"All we can do is to make an arrest. We have to do that."

Union Chiefs Weigh N. Y. Garment Strike

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (AP).—David Dubinsky, of New York, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, said the executive board, which convened here today, would give a decision on proposed strike of 120,000 garment workers in New York City.

"The existing agreement expires in January and there are prospects for a strike by February 1," Dubinsky said.

Charges Filed Against Mother Of Livermore

Attempted Murder Alleged; Divorcee Is Freed in Bail of $6,000.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Dec. 2.—Mrs. Dorothea Wendt Longcope, accused of shooting her 16-year-old son, Jesse Livermore, jr., son of the Wall street speculator, was formally charged today with assault with intent to commit murder.

Preliminary hearing for the divorced second wife of Jesse Livermore, sr., was set for December 9. She was freed later when her attorney posted a $6,000 bond.

The boy, his condition still grave from a bullet wound allegedly inflicted by his mother after an argument over drinking, may be removed from the hospital for the hearing.

Mrs. Longcope, pale and nervous, spoke just above a whisper in giving her name at her arraignment before Justice of the Peace Ernest Wagner. She seemed on the verge of collapse as the complaint was read.

The mother was charged with assaulting her son with a deadly weapon at their Montecito home late last Friday night. Undersheriff Ross said the shot was fired from a .22 caliber rifle after the boy dared Mrs. Longcope to back up her statement she would "rather see you dead than drink yourself to death."

The officer declared both the mother and son were intoxicated. The youth has refused steadfastly to accuse his mother of shooting deliberately.

Harrison Ryon, Mrs. Longcope's attorney, said it was "perfectly clear" to him the discharge of the rifle at the conclusion of a drinking party was accidental.

An oxygen tent was kept at the youth's bedside to guard against pneumonia. The bullet lodged near his spine. The father came here from St. Louis as soon as he was notified of the shooting.

Victoria Dies; Spinster Sister Of King George

Death at Age of 67 Follows Years of Ill Health; Transfusion Fails.

By the Associated Press.

London (Tuesday), Dec. 3.—Princess Victoria, sister of King George, died early today.

The princess, who was 67 years old, never married. She was the favorite grandchild of Queen Victoria, and was known as the favorite sister of King George.

She died at her home in Buckinghamshire at 3:35 a. m. (10:35 p. m., Monday, E. S. T.).

The official bulletin said:

"Her Royal Highness has had a peaceful death."

Long in Ill Health.

The Princess, never strong, had suffered from illness much of her life. Her death swiftly followed an ailment that developed Sunday night, when she was reported ill from a stomach hemorrhage.

She is survived by a sister, Princess Maud Charlotte Mary Victoria, Queen of Norway. The other sister was Princess Louise Victoria Alexandra Dagmar, who married the Duke of Fife.

King George is the only surviving brother. The Duke of Clarence, who was the first child of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, died in 1892 at the age of 28, and an infant boy, Prince Alexander, who was born in 1871, lived only a day.

Princess Victoria, whose title was her royal highness Princess Victoria Alexandra Olga Mary, spent most of her life in the company of her mother, who died November 20, 1925.

Lived in Retirement.

The princess never took a prominent part in public life.

Her last illness had its beginning about three weeks ago. She did not attend the marriage of the Duke of Gloucester to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott, at Buckingham Palace November 11, nor the christening of Prince Edward of Kent, November 20.

The King and Queen paid a special visit to her home at Iver, in Buckinghamshire, November 24, but it was not until Sunday night that the public was informed her illness was critical.

Carey Thomas, NotedEducator, Succumbs at 79

Bryn Mawr Builder Also Was a Crusader for Equal Rights.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 2.—Miss M. Carey Thomas, distinguished educator and crusader for women's rights, died today. Her death occurred just a month after she helped celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of Bryn Mawr College, built with her aid from a student body of 40 in 1885 to the present extensive institution.

Associated with Bryn Mawr throughout the entire 50 years of its life, as dean, president and president emeritus, Miss Thomas held this honorary position at her death. She was intimately associated with the founding of Johns Hopkins University Medical School. She was 79.

Bryn Mawr's undergraduates joined today with the college's alumnae throughout the country in mourning her death. President Marion Edwards Park, who succeeded Miss Thomas as president in 1922, said:

"These (plans for building Bryn Mawr) were the expression of her overwhelming interest in women and their preparation to take an equal part with men in the work and especially the leadership of the world.

Deprived of Degrees Won.

"They express also her belief in education. She was fortunate enough to be able to express the combination of these two interests."

Profoundly disappointed after both Leipsic and Goettingen Universities refused, because of her sex, to give her degrees she had earned in 1878 and 1882, respectively, Miss Thomas went on to obtain finally a degree at the University of Zurich. Then she studied at the Sorbonne, Paris, before returning to the United States in 1885 to begin her long battle for equal educational, political and social recognition of women.

She became dean of the faculty and professor of English at the founding of Bryn Mawr in that year.

In 1894 she succeeded Dr. James E. Rhoads, first president of Bryn Mawr, when he resigned, and she held the presidency, together with her professorship in English, until 1922. Upon her retirement in that year she was made president emeritus.

In the same year, Bryn Mawr established its M. Carey Thomas Award—a prize of $5,000 given at intervals to an American woman for distinguished achievement. It was first awarded in 1922 to Miss Thomas herself; in 1931 to the late Jane Addams. On November 2, at the closing session of the Bryn Mawr anniversary program, the award was given to Dr. Florence Rena Sabin, noted anatomist of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York.

She was born in Baltimore January 2, 1857, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Carey Thomas. Her father was a prominent physician and philanthropist. Surviving are three sisters, Mrs. Simon Flexner, New York; Mrs. Morris Carey, Baltimore, and Mrs. M. G. Worthington, London.

Funeral plans have not been announced.

D. C. Boundary Truce Sought In Compromise

who withheld further details as a result of the decision to keep its report secret until Congress convenes next month.

Brough, a former Governor of Arkansas, announced a week ago that the report would be made public December 1, the expiration date of the Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Commission. Failure of the draft to appear as scheduled, it was learned yesterday, was due to a ruling by Ansel Wold, clerk of Congress' joint committee on printing, that public notice must await transmittal of the report to Congress and the Virginia Assembly.

The three-man boundary group, composed of William C. Gloth, Malcolm S. McConihe and Brough, chose a "line of convenience" after throwing out the high-water-mark claims of the Federal Government and the low-water-mark argument of Virginia, whose counsel also demanded that the boundary extend from headland to headland on the Potomac's right bank.

High Water Upheld.

In the past half century several decisions of the Supreme Court have upheld the high-water mark as the boundary. None, however, has settled the controversy.

Judge G. A. Iverson and Henry H. Glassie, Department of Justice representatives, who were counsel for the Federal Government in arguments before the commission, said they had not been officially notified of the quasi-judicial body's recommendations when asked last night whether the United States would contest all or any part of the report.

Established early in 1934 as an investigative group, the commission's life expired Sunday, its task finished after two extensions had been granted. Whether or not its work shall have been fruitful or fruitless depends entirely on how its recommendations are accepted by Congress and the Virginia Legislature, both of which must ratify the report and pass necessary laws before the change in boundary becomes effective.

The Alexandria waterfront also was involved in the controversy, but this phase was disposed of, at least for the time being, last fall when Government counsel and Carl Budwesky, city attorney, reached an agreement by which the status quo is preserved. The commission's report concurs in this separate settlement, it was learned.

If the report's recommendations are carried out, Arlington County will have, besides a $40,000-a-year tax plum, the responsibility of policing Military road, a duty which the Federal, State, county and Fort Myer authorities have disclaimed for years because of the boundary puzzle.

Tutankhamen's Curse of Death Declared Fake

Held 'Pure Fabrification;' Words Not Even Found Carved on Tomb.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—The "King Tut curse" that was supposed to shadow the lives of the men who "violated" Tutankhamen's tomb in the Valley of the Nile was exposed as a fake today after the death of Prof. James H. Breasted, famed Orientalist, by one of his associates.

Tradition had it that discoverers of the mummy of the Egyptian Pharaoh found these words carved on the tomb walls:

"Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of Pharaoh."

The "inscription" was branded "a pure fabrication" by William F. Edgerton, associate professor of Egyptology in the University of Chicago's Oriental Institute, which Prof. Breasted directed up to his death in New York this morning.

"There is not and was not any such inscription in or near the tomb," Edgerton asserted in contradiction of popular superstition that the Earl of Carnarvon, Prof. Breasted and others had died of a "mysterious malady" brought down by the "curse."

Belief in the malediction is "absurd," Edgerton said, but even if there were a curse, it has proved ineffective because "aside from Egyptian workmen" the one man who actually broke into the ancient burial place is still alive and healthy.

"That man was Mr. Howard Carter, who pierced the outermost door of the tomb on November 5, 1922, with his own hands, and pierced the second door (the one which gave entrance to the tomb itself) on November 26, 1922, again with his own hands," Prof. Breasted's aid declared.

"It was also Mr. Carter who, with his own hands, pierced the third sealed doorway, the one which leads to the burial chamber where Tutankhamen's body lay and still lies in royal state.

"This operation was performed on February 17, 1923, in the presence of Dr. Breasted and some 20 other persons. Of those who were present on that occasion, about one-third are personally known to me and are certainly alive and well.

of Chicago, said his father's body would be cremated.

Another son and a daughter survive.

Dr. Breasted was a native of Rockford, Ill.

A graduate of Northwestern University, class of 1888, he began his professional career as an assistant in Egyptology at the University of Chicago in 1894. In that year he began his explorative work in the Valley of the Nile, the Valley of the Kings of Egypt.

Dr. Breasted 11 years ago persuaded the Egyptian government to allow entrance to the tombs of the pharoahs.

In recent years, the archeologist has remained in Chicago most of the time, directing the work of the expeditions in the field. The Oriental institute of the University of Chicago, which he headed, was actively engaged in excavations in Egypt, Syria, Palestine, Anatolia, Assyria, Babylonia, Persia and other spots in the Far and Near East.

Delegate to Parley.

He went abroad recently as a delegate to the International Congress of Orientalists in Rome, last September. One of his accomplishments while abroad for the last time was to persuade the government of Iran (Persia) to allow further exploration at Persepolis, the citadel of the old Persian kings, Darius and Xerxes.

Before he sailed several months ago, he was asked about the curse on the walls of Tutankhamen's tomb.

"Tommyrot," he exclaimed, adding:

"I defy the 'curse.' And if anyone was exposed to it, I was. For two weeks I slept in the tomb of Tutankhamen and took my meals there. I never felt better."

Dr. James Harvey Robinson, the historian, who was a close friend of Dr. Breasted, paid him the following tribute:

"Prof. Breasted possessed a rare combination of rare qualifications.

"He was an exacting and patient scholar, a marvelous organizer able to enlist the interests necessary to found and maintain the Oriental Institute with its extensive archeological enterprises, and a most gentle and altogether delightful personality.

"His books have made ancient civilization a living subject."

"After Mr. Carter had personally begun the removal of the masonry blocking the doorway he was assisted in removing the lower courses by Mr. Arthur B. Mace and Mr. Thomas Callender. Only one of these three men, Mace, has died in the intervening years. Callander, like Carter, is still alive and well."

As far as Prof. Breasted was concerned, Edgerton said, he had "nothing to do with the events leading up to the discovery of Tutuankhamen's tomb, and at no time did he have any official connection with the work."

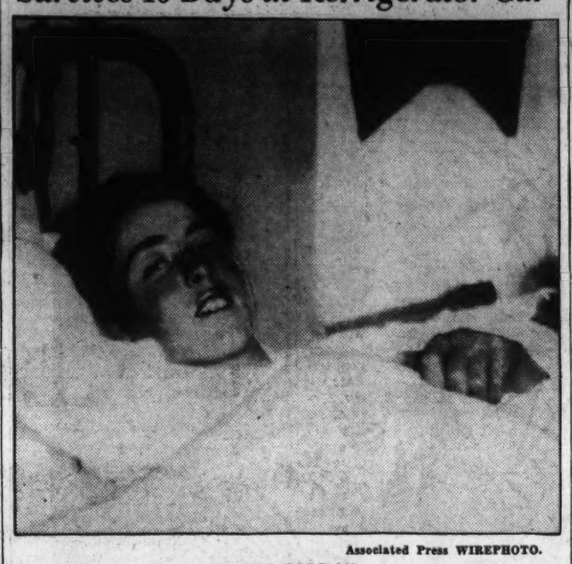
Survives 10 Days in Refrigerator Car



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

GLENN BOLDAN.

Boy, 14, Tells Terrors of Trip Across U. S. Locked in Icy Car

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 2.—"Thawing out" on a hospital bed, 14-year-old Glenn Boldan today told of the terror that engulfed him for ten days within the dark and cold interior of a sealed ice compartment of a railway refrigerator car.

The Motley (Minn.) farm youth was rescued starved and half-frozen from his icy prison here early today. Trapped in it without food or water November 22 at Roseville or Tracy, Calif.—he could not remember which—he frantically had battered its walls to escape until he sank into a stupor.

Seek to Save Feet.

"It was dark and cold and terrible in there—all that time," he said, as physicians worked to soothe a resultant fever and, if possible, save his frostbitten feet from amputation.

Bernard Ricklin, attracted by moans as he was unloading a lettuce car, found Glenn. He called Burleigh Brown and they lifted the semi-conscious boy from the narrow compartment that had held him as the freight car rattled and jolted slowly across the continent.

Taken to Union Memorial Hospital, he was given food as soon as he was able to eat. This helped revive him and he talked eagerly of returning home, from which he had run away on Labor Day to escape school.

Wants to Forget.

He wanted to forget the weird, dark and cold journey across the continent—so desperate that he chewed his wet cap and shoe tops and ate seed from cotton locks he had picked up as souvenirs.

"Now, after tha," he said, "I'm going home, and I'll be mighty happy to get there."

He had heard his father was ill and had started home, he said, when he crawled into the compartment of the refrigerator car. He fell asleep and when he awoke five other boys who had been with him were gone.

U. S. Asks Custody Of Kidnap Suspect

Plan 3 Charges Against New York Captive.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Dec. 2.—The Federal Government demanded custody tonight of Samuel Valery, 36, of Troy, N. Y., held in $50,000 bail on a Boston police charge of kidnaping a 17-year-old Boston girl.

He waived examination and was held for the grand jury.

Assistant United States Attorney William T. McCarthy said he had demanded custody of Valery in a letter to District Attorney William J. Foley, of Suffolk County who, earlier in the day, had refused to surrender the man to Federal agents.

McCarthy said the Federal Government was prepared to prosecute Valery under the drastic Lindbergh law, the Dyer act pertaining to interstate transportation of stolen automobiles and the Mann act. A warrant charging violation of the latter was issued by United States Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney.

Maxwell Girl's Defense Fund Grows to $381

Contributions to the Edith Maxwell defense fund continue to mount. Yesterday's donations from 15 Washingtonians totaled $21.50.

With each contribution came letters of encouragement to the blue-eyed mountain girl, who faces a 25-year jail sentence because she defended herself with a high-heeled slipper against attacks of a drunken father.

Three mountain girls sent a small donation, with a message:

"We are three mountain girls, too—or, we were. We know all about the terror Edith felt for her "pappy" because we've been through it. We know a "pappy" can hit and hit hard. And big girls, too.

"Outside people don't ever know how things go up there—until something like this happens, and we're glad it did happen. Everybody should know.

"We can't put our names onto this because we don't want the hill people to ever find out how we feel. We want our $2.50 to do some good for Edith."

Excerpts from other letters follow:

"I am sure the good Lord will not punish that poor girl for something she did not do. I am sure she is innocent."

"May God bless your efforts. Here is my mite toward the splendid thing you are doing."

'Bum' Basis of Suit Against LaGuardia

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—The definition of the word "bum" was the issue today at a hearing on a motion to dismiss a $50,000 slander suit brought against Mayor LaGuardia.

"What is the meaning of 'bum?'" asked Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook.

Decidedly not slanderous, said counsel for Mayor LaGuardia, who was charged by Charles Shankroff, real estate broker, with addressing him as "you bum," before the board of estimate.

"I've heard good friends call each other bum," continued the mayor's counsel.

By Virginia Lee Warren,
A Staff Correspondent.

Pound, Va., Dec. 2.—Women in this little mountain town are sharply divided into two classes—the good and the bad. There is no in-between, cocktail-drinking, cigarette-smoking set.

The good women stay close to their homes, obey their husbands, look after their children and do a prodigious amount of work. They go to church and to an occasional movie in Norton, a thriving little city of 5,000 about 17 miles away. They don't smoke and they don't drink.

Here in this section of the Cumberland Mountains, less than 10 miles from the Kentucky line, the belief is that "a girl who'd take a drink would do anything."

Liquor and tobacco are considered the prerogatives of "bad" women who haunt the rowdy dance halls and who contribute gayety of a sort to the night life of surrounding mining settlements.

Attended Church.

Mrs. Trigg Maxwell and her 21-year-old Edith belong to the good, quiet kind. They attend church—or at least they did until last July, when the girl was locked in the jail at Wise charged with the murder of her father.

After the trial a couple of weeks ago, when Edith was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary, Mrs. Maxwell also stopped going to church. The neighbors refused to speak to her because she "took up for her daughter at the trial."

But there doesn't seem to be anyone here who accuses Trigg Maxwell's womenfolks of "chasin' out around the countryside." Sentiment is bitter against both mother and daughter. But that is because the girl dared hit her father on the head with a slipper as she tried to defend herself when he attempted to beat her for staying out after dark with a neighbor boy.

Never Much Freedom.

Edith had never had much freedom. Her 55-year-old father, a pump mine inspector, wanted her home every night from supper time on. He didn't want her to "get to running around so she'd be talked about." But then most fathers in Pound are like that. They believe there are only two kinds of women in this section, the good and the bad.

Three years ago Edith Maxwell entered East Radford State Teachers College on money she had borrowed from an aunt and from the school. She was there from 1932 to 1934, the first member of her family to go to college. An older brother and two sisters had finished high school at Pound.

Discipline at the Teachers College is strict. East Radford is about 100 miles east of Pound and the school tries to live up to the ideas of behavior that parents in this section expect of their children.

Got Along Well.

Edith Maxwell had no trouble at college. She got along with the faculty and the other students. She was high-spirited, full of the exuberance of youth, but showed "no signs of wildness." Her former teachers here at the high school recalled today that she was always lively, made friends easily and liked athletics. She was considered a good basketball player.

After two years at East Radford the Maxwell girl came back here to teach the one-room school on Bold Camp Creek. She continued to live at home while she taught. Her school was only 3 miles or so up the road. And she continued to spend most of her evenings in the Maxwell's white frame shack because Pappy Maxwell wanted her to.

One Saturday afternoon last summer—July 20, to be exact—Edith went up the winding mountain road to Wise, the county seat, with one of her boy cousins and his girl friend.

Things had been quiet and peaceful in the Maxwell household for the last few weeks. Pappy, who liked his liquor, had quit drinking. Well, at least he had cut out whisky. He drank a little beer now and then. But on this Saturday afternoon in July the air hung heavy with sultry heat. Pound is down in a pocket of the Cumberland range, more than 1,000 feet below Wise. It gets mighty hot there.

Drank Beer.

Pappy Maxwell and one of his cronies settled down in the Lonesome Pine Cafe for some steady beer drinking. At the trial it was never determined exactly how much Maxwell consumed. He had at least three bottles at the Lonesome Pine. Later on that evening his 11-year-old daughter, Mary Catherine, saw him again and reported to her mother that "Pappy is drinkin' pretty high." There seems to be little doubt he had at least two more bottles of beer, making five in all.

As soon as he got home he began to quarrel with his wife. Then he wanted to know where Edith was. Edith hadn't come back from Wise yet. Darkness settled over Pound. Still no Edith.

In Wise she was trying to find a way to get home. Her cousin and his girl had decided to remain there longer than Edith wanted to stay. She knew Pappy would be angry at her absence. Finally she hailed 22-year-old Raymond Meade who lives in a neat yellow frame house between the county seat and Pound. He consented to drive her home. In his car at the time was his brother, his brother's girl, a married couple and their baby.

Left Passengers.

These passengers were dropped along the way so that young Meade and Edith were alone by the time they reached Pound. He asked her if she'd like to drive on a couple of miles to the Ritz Cafe for a bite to eat. She said she would. At the Ritz they met some other boys and girls they knew and so Edith, forgetful of her father's strictness, stayed on laughing and talking with the group.

It was one of her few nights of freedom. And it was her last one for a long time to come. When she got home a little before midnight she found Pappy Maxwell in one of his ugliest moods. He had already told Mommy and Mary Catherine in referring to Edith that he "ought to take a club and break her neck." When the girl came in he announced his intention of whipping her.

Then the struggle began. And in her wild efforts to defend herself, Edith Maxwell grabbed a shoe she felt beneath her as her father knocked her to the floor. She hit her Pappy on the head with the slipper until he released his hold on her.

An hour later Trigg Maxwell died.

Now his daughter is in jail at Wise. Unless defense counsel can get her a new trial she will be taken to the penitentiary at the end of the present term of court to begin serving her 25-year sentence for murder in the first-degree.

Injurious Uncertainty.

When the "deadline" was reached Sunday night, 58 holding companies had applied to the SEC for registration under the holding company act. But most of the big companies, acting on advice of counsel, decided not to register, fearing that their right to contest the constitutionality of the law might thereby be impaired. A majority of those that applied, moreover, did so under protest, reserving the right to challenge the validity of the regulatory law. Thus it appears that the utilities as a whole are almost solidly united in opposition to the act, although their methods of fighting it differ.

Attorney General Cummings has promised immunity from criminal prosecution, pending a final determination of the constitutional issues. Meanwhile the unregistered companies are asking the courts to enjoin enforcement of the act by the SEC. But these precautionary measures merely emphasize the necessity of haste in securing a decision on contested points from the Supreme Court. Under the law the unregistered companies are not only forbidden to engage in the interstate transmission of gas and electricity, but are prohibited from distributing or offering for sale any of their own securities or those of subsidiaries.

While the companies will no doubt be permitted to carry on business as usual until the status of the law is determined, immunity from fines and punishment will not remove the obstacles to new financing resulting from present uncertainties. The utilities will not be able to finance an expansion program or place new securities upon the market so long as threats of dissolution or reorganization hang over them.

The Committee of Public Utility Executives recently pointed out that the electric light and power industry represents an investment of approximately $12,000,000,000, and that it has spent nearly a billion dollars yearly in wages, raw materials and other operating outlays. Furthermore, it is one of the largest customers of such basic industries as steel, coal, copper and lumber. All these industries will be unfavorably affected and general business recovery correspondingly retarded until the utilities and the Government know definitely what limits are to be set to the regulatory powers of the SEC.

Chess And The Times.

Yesterday's papers reported the death of Frank B. Walker, a retired official of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, who was widely known throughout the country as an outstanding chess player. He had been District champion several times and twice represented Washington against experts from abroad.

His passing draws attention to the sad and perhaps significant fact that there are at best few of the rising generation who are learning the ancient game. Gambit today is a word seldom heard except around occasional hearths and in a few inviolate clubrooms. Life is geared at too fast a pitch to allow of the deliberate maneuvering required by rooks and knights.

It is, indeed, a curious anomaly of the times that those who would play chess have too little time for it, while millions who have time by the clockful on their hands know little and care less about a game which both requires and creates a real philosophy of life.

Effective Co-operation.

Orders for the gradual reduction of the Civilian Conservation Corps from its present figure of 478,000 to 300,000 are an inevitable sequence of the ruling that all camp members must be taken from families on relief. As work-relief employment diminishes the number of the latter, the CCC enrollment should naturally dwindle. In the future, if the total of relief families grows instead of decreases as expected, the capacity of the corps will presumably be expanded proportionately.

It is a tribute to the careful operation of these camps that some 88,000 youths have gone out from them into private employment since April. Some part of the credit for this encouraging news must be given to the vocational training afforded the campers, to say nothing of their increased value as workers as a result of the healthful life and discipline they have had. But additional importance attaches to the fact that all CCC youths and war veterans, on entering the camps, are automatically registered with the United States Employment Service. Again, on leaving, their home addresses are kept on file by this agency.

This is an excellent example of constructive co-ordination of governmental agencies. And further appreciable headway against the problem of unemployment can be expected through wider utilization of the employment service. It cannot make work, but it can bring the available man and the appropriate job together with a maximum of speed and mutual satisfaction which, in effect, is not far removed from actual job creation.

The Debt Limit.

With the completion of mid-December financing operations, the Federal debt is expected to reach the record high figure of $30,500,000,000. In his Atlanta address President Roosevelt informed the country that "many of the great bankers" of the United States in the spring of 1933 assured him that the debt could rise to from $55,000,000,000 to $70,000,000,000 without serious danger to the Nation's credit. In justice to the numerous representative bankers who disclaim expressing any such views, more specific information in this matter is in order.

A poll of banking opinion is not necessary, however, to pass judgment upon the fiscal policies of an Administration that has added approximately $8,000,000,000 to an already huge Federal debt since June, 1933. If the ability of the taxpayer to survive the pressure of this mounting indebtedness is to be adequately gauged, a further $20,000,000,000, the estimated volume of State and local indebtedness, should also be considered, not to mention the important factors of the sum of individual obligations.

To gain a complete picture of the debt situation, moreover, approximately $8,000,000,000 of contingent liabilities of the Federal Government must be taken into account. Although guaranteed issues, such as HOLC and Federal farm mortgage bonds, are secured by earnings assets, any losses incurred will fall upon taxpayers, while the placement of these securities creates more financing problems for the Government.

For a country with a national income estimated to be less than $50,000,000,000 in 1934, a public debt already in excess of $50,000,000,000 is a decidedly heavy burden. With taxes absorbing about one-fifth of our national income and public expenditures, Federal, State and local, taking about 30 per cent of it, the prospect of a Federal debt even remotely approaching $70,000,000,000 can not possibly be viewed with the complacency attributed to Mr. Roosevelt's banker friends. However, the actual size of the debt is much less perturbing than the rapidity of its growth and the concentration of new issues in bank portfolios.

At the end of last June, for example, the member banks of the Reserve system held approximately $9,900,000,000 of direct Government obligations, and over $1,500,000,000 of fully-guaranteed obligations, out of total loans and investments amounting to $28,800,000,000. Not only the actual size of these holdings, but the rapid rise that has occurred in the proportion of Government issues to other bank assets, is a cause of acute anxiety to far-sighted bankers. But the Treasury is making virtually no effort to tap the resources of individual investors while the excess reserves of the banks can be relied upon to create a demand for new Government issues.

Since these reserves have been built up through Government spending, gold imports, and in other ways, they are no indication of the saving capacity of the people. Nor is the low yield any measure of the confidence felt by the investor in the superlative character of the Government's credit. In short, the artificial character of the bond market and the extreme dependence of the Treasury upon the banks to put through its financing are inevitably disquieting.

As any sudden decline in the market value of Government securities would seriously impair the position of the banks, besides increasing the difficulties of covering the Federal deficit, efforts to "mop up" excess reserves are handicapped. Indeed, so long as deficit financing continues, the Treasury will probably be inclined to oppose any form of credit control that would restrict banking outlets for new Federal issues.

It will be seen, therefore, that the actual size of the debt is less disturbing than the constant increase in the deficit. It may be conceded that under certain conditions, not now present, the country could support a much larger debt. Prolonged deficit financing, however, creates an atmosphere of distrust that is likely to undermine investment confidence long before the theoretical limit of the borrower's capacity to pay has been reached.

Biting The Hand.

In 1926 Will Durant attempted, by his "Story of Philosophy," to make that subject safe for the unphilosophical. Now, by eugenics, he is attempting to make the world safe for democracy.

According to summaries of an address which he delivered in New York on Sunday evening, Dr. Durant considers the Government of this country incapable of measuring up—at "the inevitable test, in diplomacy and war"—to "the trained aristocracies of Europe and Japan." The trouble, he says, is that our governmental system is essentially "headless;" our whole plan one "in which men are selected for office because of their political skill." And the sole means of escape is by a catalogue of remedies designed to eliminate "breeding from the bottom and dying at the top."

Here are two problems: one for the philosopher, another for the political scientist. Most genuine philosophers would be slow to indorse Will Durant's acrid comparison of his "headless democracy" with the "trained aristocracies of Europe and Japan." In what way the latter encourage profound faith in the aristocratic system is far from clear. And for students of political science it only begs the question to state the truism that democracies cannot be efficient with a deficient electorate.

The problem is to achieve the best possible government with the human material available. And in the United States that is at least sufficiently good to pay Dr. Durant's writings and sayings a lot of attention.

Neutrality Legislation.

There is virtual unanimity on the deficiences of the existing neutrality legislation, rushed through Congress at the close of the last session in the questionable belief that any law in this highly complicated field would be better than none at all. But on the issue of the permanent policy which should replace the temporary sections of the present act there are exceedingly wide divergencies of opinion. It is a subject on which intelligent public opinion should be concentrated, for nothing of equal national importance is likely to confront the Congress when it reassembles next month.

Before then there will be occasion to point out some of the almost innumerable complexities in this field. But at the moment a fundamental consideration, which applies not merely to the neutrality problem but perhaps to our legislative methods in general, may properly be noted.

It seems almost a national characteristic to believe that baffling problems may be successfully disposed of by hastily passing a law on the subject at issue. And the general reaction is that the more difficult the problem, the more important it is that the remedial law should be drastic, sweeping and inflexible. One would have thought that the complete collapse of Prohibition would have taught some wisdom as to the limits within which this type of legislation can be really effective. Seemingly, however, that is not the case.

Senator Bone, the first member of the Senate Munitions Committee to return to Washington, announces that this group will press for enactment of the three resolutions reported out by it last summer, but neglected in the adjournment rush. These measures have certain points meriting serious consideration, but also many dangerous shortcomings which indicate only too clearly that they have not been subjected to any critical analysis. Public hearings, devoted to issues other than condemnation of profiteering in the last war, would quickly reveal these defects. And such hearings, considering all the possible pitfalls in future neutrality legislation, must be made an essential part of the careful drafting period which cannot be safely sidestepped.

This is the more important because it appears that not a few Congressmen have at present a very confused understanding of the background of even the present neutrality legislation. Senator Bone, for instance, is quoted as referring to the act now in effect as an administrative measure. It is true that such constructive aspects as the act possesses were suggested by the Department of State. But as a whole it was an eleventh-hour hodge-podge, forced on the Administration. This was made clear by the President, who, in signing the measure, pointed out that its inflexible provisions "might drag us into war instead of keeping us out."

There is little question of the will of the country as a whole for effective neutrality as a settled policy. There is very grave doubt of the possibility of achieving this end by mandatory legislation on the subject. A truce to all emotionalizing and a concentration on hard and well-informed thinking will be essential if the country is not to get neutrality legislation which will prove, in the upshot, a far more ghastly flop than was the Eighteenth Amendment.

Business Upturn.

From The Butalo Evening News.

The American Federation of Labor, whose statistics on production, employment, and pay rolls are reliable, says that the Nation is on the eve of an industrial boom. This is good news. But the conservative thinkers of the Nation will receive the optimistic tidings with considerable doubt. If the high tide of recovery fails to carry with it the 9,000,000-odd unemployed, how can any degree of permanent prosperity be achieved? It is a question which political and economic leaders cannot afford to ignore.

Conservative businessmen continue to view with alarm the excess bank reserves which have been pushed above the $3,000,000,000 mark. They point also to the fact that the public debt was increased by $760,000,000 between July 1 and October 31 of this year. The breakdown of relief is a disturbing development. Nevertheless, the trend in trade, commerce, and industry is toward economic normalcy. It is hoped that the President and his advisers can be induced to let well enough alone, refraining from promoting discriminatory and reckless legislation when Congress convenes next January.

Germany And Russia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hitler's declaration printed in your paper of Thursday, November 28, concerning the treatment of the Jews in Germany, raises the point of the alleged overcrowding of the professions by the German Jew.

Far be it from me to question the accuracy of any statement made by the Fuehrer and "chosen" representative of 65,000,000 Germans. I therefore assume that the statement is correct. But a careful reading of your paper fails to record any act of the present German government tending to the absorption of the Jews, forcibly thrown out from the professions or the trades in other gainful occupations, especially in agriculture. From the news published in your paper, it is evident that the German government is discouraging or forbidding any attempt of the German Jews to find employment in the trades or in agriculture. Only emigration of Jews from Germany is encouraged by the Fuehrer, and that only on condition that they leave all their possessions behind.

Contrasting the action of the dictators of Russia with that of the dictator of Germany, we find that the change to bolshevism in Russia completely ruined the economic life of the Russian Jews. But the Russian dictators have given the Jews an opportunity to establish themselves in the new order of things and have encouraged their participation in agriculture by spending large sums of money to organize Jewish agricultural settlements in various part of Russia.

If the choice is, as stated by Hitler, between bolshevism as practiced by the dictators of Russia and Nazism, as practiced by the German dictators, then any person who believes in the Golden Rule and in the principle of live and let live, may on careful consideration choose the former as the lesser of two evils.

One Vote Lost.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who voted for Franklin D. for the first and last time in 1932. I wish to congratulate him on his able campaign speech—for the opposition—delivered by him down in his "second home," Gawgia. It will take the solid (ivory) South to fall for his line a second time, all vote-purchasing New Dealisms notwithstanding.

As for the banking buddies who filled up Roosevelt with that terrible advice about the $55,000,000,000, this helps explain the greater than average insanity said to exist among bankers. The President owes it as a duty to the widely proclaimed forgotten man to reveal the identity of these banking prodigals so that others like myself who have a few "C's" in big banks might remove their hoards from the jurisdiction of such boobs.

But as an invitation to veterans to come and get it (the bonus), the President's speech was a master stroke; after it, any effort on his part to veto such a measure would be the rankest hypocrisy.

DAN K. MILLER.

League Criticisms.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sources of the League of Nations weakness are too fundamental to permit reasonable confidence either in the sincereness of its acts or in the capability of serving as an effective instrument for the preservation of peace. These sources can perhaps best be grouped according to the hemisphere in which different member nations live. Thus, for the Eastern Hemisphere they may be said to be the following: (1) Diversity of political interests. (2) Diversity of economic interests. (3) Multiplicity of racial groups. (4) A tendency on the part of one group to put up with another that is closest to it in blood, culture or other ties in complete disregard of the question of guilt or innocence.

For the Western Hemisphere, on the other hand, they are mainly these: (1) Remoteness of the economic and political interest of the Latin-American nations from the same class of interests of the European nations, at least in point of distance if not also otherwise. (2) The Monroe Doctrine. Indeed, the latter almost completely nullifies the sanctions clause of the Covenant when it becomes applicable to any part of this hemisphere.

Moreover, this source of weakness would continue to exist with as well as without the United States as a member of the League. How strange and unbelievable it seems that President Wilson could dream of making this country a member in the face of what is an almost sacred doctrine to our people!

MORRIS I. FELDMAN.

Estimate Of Jellicoe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A writer to The Post states that "Jellicoe failed to bring the war to a speedy close by a (decisive) triumph at Jutland."

Such a "famous victory" certainly would not have shortened the war any. The Germans depended for success on their armies, their undersea craft and their air weapons. They still had these, even if the German high seas squadron had been completely wiped out. Its partly preserved fleet was of no value to Germany. It could not break the British blockade because even at full fighting strength it was too weak in tonnage. It was outnumbered 3 to 1 by all of the allied navies.

Technically, Jellicoe won the battle. His ships had possession of the field when all was over. And in a larger sense he won the campaign. The enemy vessels remained bottled up, and Germany went hungry.

A Pointless Hunt?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Judging from the usual execution of justice in Prince Georges County, one is compelled to wonder why so much time and money is expended in a search for the murderer of Corinna Loring. I have to wonder whether anything would be done with the maniac after he or she is captured.

Let us resort to judicial precedent. Only recently a woman killed her husband out there. And what did the jury have to say about it? They let her go scot free.

With an acquittal in the one instance, there is strong reason to anticipate an acquittal in the other. And no doubt the slayer, with his fingers on Corinna's throat, bore the thought in mind. PLEBEIAN.

Washington, Nov. 28.

Replies To A Dairy Farmer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your moderate and understanding editorial on the Canadian Treaty is not to go unchallenged, it appears. A gentleman in The Post of November 29 blandly qualifies as an expert on the intricacies of the tariff and foreign trade by certifying to his ownership of a dairy farm. He then presents a devastating argument forninst you: The dairying business is in a bad way; the Canadian Treaty permits some importation of dairy products; therefore, in the opinion of your correspondent, the whole reciprocal treaty is "cockeyed."

As a class, practical business men possess fine agile minds. But they appear to feel it taboo to increase the radius of their economic knowledge to where it might circumscribe an area larger than their own particular interest. So few of them have vision to see that their own prosperity must rest upon the general welfare of the entire Nation.

Upon the chance that your critic might desire enlightenment, could you not, in another editorial, point out to him that in more than 60 per cent of the American homes the income limits the consumption of milk products to a point cruelly below the minimum necessary for family health; that from every dollar's worth of imports there inevitably arises a dollar's worth of exports; that if reciprocal treaties bring about revival of manufacturing trade the increased demand for dairy products from these millions of undernourished families will vastly outweigh the limited amount of dairy products that could be imported?

And by all means have the editorial written by a member of your staff who at some time or other has owned a cow.

DWIGHT T. SCOTT.

Chevy Chase, D. C., Nov. 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your reprint of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch editorial on Friday, November 29, is indeed the answer to Myron H. Bent's letter published on the same day.

In his analysis of the new Canadian pact, Mr. Bent seems to have overlooked the limitations therein contained, limitations expressly instituted for the protection of the dairy industry.

For example, not more than 1,500,000 gallons of cream may be imported per year. We consume approximately 2,250,000,000 pounds of butter annually. These 1,500,000 gallons of Canadian cream would produce about 6,000,000 pounds of butter, or only the infinitesmal amount of 0.27 of 1 per cent of our total consumption. It is obvious that these 1,500,000 gallons would not all go to one State and, therefore, would hardly cripple, much less "kill," the dairy industry throughout the country.

The duty on cheese has been reduced from 7 cents to 5 cents, but on American Cheddar cheese only. Surely we consume many other varieties of cheese.

Let us repeat: "The criterion for judgment must be the greatest good to the greatest number and not the protests of a few."

The Post Impressionist

Education Of A Scientist.

Post Office, Tuesday.

"OVER at the Smithsonian" there has been busy speculation as to the identity of the man who will write the definitive biography of Henry Fairfield Osborn.

We believe that we know the chosen author.

When Osborn died, the other day, this Column confidently awaited, in the accounts of him then published, some data about the forbears and early training of that great paleontologist who found New York's American Museum of Natural History a good sideshow and left it a national institution. After all, one of his keenest interests was an interest in heredity and eugenics—and if he wasn't an educationist, then all the faculties of all the universities are playboys.

Until today, however, our wait went unrewarded.

It can't be that the obituary-writers were in a hurry. Most newspaper-obituaries of most prominent persons are written while those persons still draw exuberant breath; their journalistic biographies await the ultimate summons in filing-cases where they are kept continuously up-to-date. Perhaps the writers felt a little as William K. Gregory feels:

"That even the lowest human intelligence is too complex to be accounted for historically, and that the growth of each self is a unique integration of actions and reactions to hereditary, physiological and environmental stimuli which it is difficult or impossible to untangle."

Yet among Osborn's earlier friends was Galton: there was a time when the two collaborated; Osborn's appreciation of Galton's "Record of Family Faculties" made controversy in 1884. And Dr. Gregory has thus concluded the above-quoted passage:

"Nevertheless, there are abundant historical data which at least indicate some of the leading influences to which Osborn reacted."

So it is Dr. Gregory who at last crowns our patience. In the current issue of the Scientific Monthly, he tells something of Osborn's parents and youthful associates.

The father was just such a man as our happily unscientific mind would expect to beget a son of such wit, resource and executive ability. That William Henry Osborn, a power of "preeminent probity . . . reorganized and built up a great railroad system."

Once, the steamer bringing him home from Europe was "held so long at quarantine that he would almost inevitably be prevented from rejoining his family on Christmas Eve." This would never do! He darted to the hold whence the mail sacks were being carried, took off his overcoat, grabbed an old cap, shouldered a mailbag—"and walked to freedom down the plank to the mail-boat."

One day a gaunt gray man of 70 entered the London hall where her 25-year-old son was attending a course of lectures on comparative anatomy by Huxley. "I want," said Huxley, "to introduce Osborn, my most promising pupil." Said Darwin: "If his first two names are Henry and Fairfield, I already know his work in the American Eocene."

* * *

The question of how Osborn acquired his religious faith seems to have puzzled many. Dr. Gregory says the answer was Dr. James McCosh. Having plenty of Scotch humor, that president of Princeton during Osborn's undergraduate days managed to combine a zeal for Darwinism with his enthusiasm for Presbyterian metaphysics. "He began a series of studies upon the visualizing faculty of the mind" and, soon, inquiries into "the evolution of the nervous system in the lower vertebrates."

And Osborn sat at his feet:

"Probably it was from his more or less Calvinistic environment that Osborn derived that deep antipathy to the idea of fortuity or chance, which was to remain as an outstanding characteristic of his philosophy of evolution and made it impossible for him to accept natural selection in its Darwinian form." Though the death of his wife "intensified his passionate belief in the reality of 'creative evolution' and of the most essential features of modern Christianity, he derived them from the days of his youth, and in all his writings . . . they are set forth with clearness and conviction."

Dr. Gregory was for years research assistant to Osborn, his lifelong intimate — has been connected with the American Museum of Natural History since 1914, is a member of no end of learned associations, associate professor of vertebrate paleontology at Columbia and president of the Galton Society. His many books include a standard work "On the Structure and Relations of Notharctus, an American Eocene Primate."

But don't let that alarm you. He can write entertainingly about anything. And we predict that he will soon begin writing the authoritative biography of Henry Fairfield Osborn.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Caviar And Debts.

AMONG the privileges which are enjoyed by citizens of certain European countries is that of paying a considerable share of the cost of a luxurious steamboat ride for passengers on ships of this kind. Food on the Rex, as on the Ile de France, includes that big gray Astrakhan caviar type of French peas which cost $10 a pound at refined delicatessens in New York and $3 a treatment in restaurants.

Although the English newspapers which were received at Gibraltar reported that the Italian people were taking up their belts and observing meatless days among other forms of self-denial reminiscent of the war to end war, the menu on the Rex has not been edited as yet. Together with this caviar, the Rex offers shrimp, crab flakes and clams, sardines and anchovies, five kinds of soup, two kinds of spaghetti, sea trout, chicken, sirloin, roast beef, roast lamb, mutton chops, lamb chops, veal, turkey and many vegetables, salads and ice cream. This is not a complete score, but just a selection of the fundamentals in a well-balanced ration.

First-class fare from New York to Naples or Genoa is $262, and there are about 35 first-class passengers on this voyage of the 52,000-ton steamship which was promoted at the very crest of the era of wonderful nonsense, but missed it by three years.

SO the trip is something on the order of a yachting party, except that the guests have more room and more servants to wait on them than they would have on board Vincent Astor's Nourmahal or even on the Hussar of Mr. Ned Hutton, the famous tax slave. Uncle Tom's boat carries only 75 employes, but your correspondent's yacht has about 900.

It only goes to show how a tax slave can get along on comparatively little when necessity bears down. Ordinarily, at this season, the Rex would have carried about a hundred more first-class passengers, and the decline is attributed directly to President Roosevelt's neutrality policy. Still the Italian crew do not seem at all annoyed at Americans, although right there you have a deficit of roughly $50,000 on one passage of a steamboat, and which Italian soldiers will have to get back in Ethiopia.

The Rex has been in business only since 1932 and thus was too late to catch any part of the great American freight from prohibition, which packed foreign boats like subway cars for years. In conditions which existed when the Rex was laid down she would have carried several hundred first-class fares and the money would have paid for the boat ride and food and left a little profit. But, as it is, every time a passenger destroys a bead of caviar Italian citizens have to dig into their deficit and provide a portion of the cost.

THE Germans also have the honor of paying a share on the board bills of people who ride on their Bremen and Europa, ships which are in approximately the same class with the Ile de France, Savoia and Rex.

The Italians received a good share of the German business for a long time, but now that they, too, are under boycott, French and English, and to some extent American cabin boats will prosper. Still the great trouble with the Rex has been that she arrived on the sea too late. The French, on the other hand, got their Ile de France into the water in time to catch more than two years of the boom, and she is supposed to have paid out by now, although their new Normandie, which is about 20,000 tons bigger than the Ile de France, is developing a reputation as a great national pain in the neck. For some obscure reason the Normandie jitters at high speed, and though they have gone over her several times looking for bugs in her machinery or in her design which cause her to twitch, the mystery is not solved yet. The Isle de France is luxurious, beautiful and fast and is still carrying the pay loads, while doctors go over the big one trying to find out what pains her.

Why they built the Normandie at a cost of about $50,000,000 when they could not take up a little note for $19,000,000 interest on their debt to the United States is a puzzle no less baffling than the reason why the British, in spite of similar embarrassments, went ahead with their Queen Mary, which is about the same size. The theory is that the bigger the ship the greater the profit per passenger, but only beyond a certain minimum number of passengers which is not likely to be met, much less exceeded in the present state of the market.

AND, anyway, the world is so crazy nowadays—with troops marching and swords clanking everywhere—that all these enormous boats are at the mercy of any wild-eyed nut who take it into his head to declare war for himself. To a torpedo or a bomb they are all delicate, and the bigger the ship the harder it is to miss her.

In a sense it is a mistake to believe that the unfortunate European taxpayer is buying the expensive caviar which had made such an impression on your correspondent. After all, these ships and their operating deficits represent money which they did not pay the United States on account of the loans which will have to be paid by the American taxpayer. Perhaps the American passenger is justified in calling for seconds on caviar in the belief that in the long run he will be the one who will have to pick up the check.

Oil And Italy

Development Of Gasoline Substitutes Such As Brazil's "Usga" Might Solve Problem Of Italian Army Fliers Facing Embargo.

By Livingston Hartley,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE main emphasis in international efforts to restrain the Italian invasion of Ethiopia has recently been placed on oil.

World action on oil has been temporarily delayed at Geneva at the request of Premier Laval. The League Committee of Eighteen, originally scheduled to meet on November 29 to decide whether a date should be set for the inclusion in sanctions against Italy of oil, coal, iron and steel was postponed until December 13.

On this side of the Atlantic, recently published figures indicate that American exports of oil to Italy during October were three times as large as they were in October, 1934, and that corresponding exports to Italian Africa have increased by a huge percentage. In view of these increases of war-time oil exports to belligerents, Secretary Ickes, in his capacity of petroleum administrator, has called upon American oil companies to curb their sales to Italy and Ethiopia.

This official action, giving practical force to the neutrality policy and discouraging American activities which would serve to prolong the duration of war, is likely to meet with opposition from many petroleum interests. Public opinion, on the other hand, may be expected to react favorably, since the growing export figures show in high relief the close relationship between American oil exports and the lethal activities of Italian bombing planes.

• • • •

DISPATCHES from Rome indicate a growing nervousness over oil, now far the most vital of all imports from abroad for the prosecution of the African war. Estimates vary of the amount of oil Italy has on hand, all the way from three months supply to sufficient for another year. In normal times Italy uses some 700,000 tons of oil and gasoline yearly, 95 per cent of which has to be imported. The high-pressure operations of airplanes, tanks and trucks in Ethiopia and of oil-burning transports and cargo ships which serve as the main artery of the invading army, may result in an increase of Italian consumption far above this figure, in spite of economies in the use of gasoline at home.

It is obvious that an oil-tight embargo on petroleum shipments to Italy, enforced by the British Empire, The Netherlands, Russia, Rumania, Mexico and the United States would end Mussolini's war in Africa, if the Ethiopian armies could hold out long enough. Hence the nervousness about oil in Rome, which has given rise to new threats by the spokesmen of Mussolini. It has even been intimated that an effective American curb on exports of oil to Italy would place the United States upon the lengthy list of "despised sanctionist countries."

• • • •

THESE threats are accompanied by propaganda which may prove to be far more effectual in influencing American public opinion. It is pointed out that large portions of Italy are mountainous in character, inadequately served by railroads, and entirely dependent upon motor buses and trucks for their communications and economic life. A stoppage of oil exports to Italy, according to inspired articles, would strike a cruel blow at the humble and innocent inhabitants of thousands of villages and towns, whose lives would be paralyzed economically by the immobilization of their only means of transport. We Americans, dependent more than any other people on automobiles in our normal daily life, can conjure up pathetic pictures of simple peasants and village folk cut off from the outer world by a breakdown of communications, and facing pitiable privations, including even a shortage of food.

If it were a fact that gasoline is essential to the operation of buses and trucks, this picture might be true, because in any competition between Italian peasants and Mussolini's armies for a limited supply of gasoline the interests of the country folk would not be given much weight. We must not overlook, however, a factor of primary importance in the current question of oil, the existence of gasoline substitutes.

Experiments in many countries, notably Germany, Argentina and Italy, have proved that industrial alcohol can be employed as a carburant. It is most efficient for use in motors when mixed with gasoline. With an alcohol mixture as high as 50 per cent, automobiles, trucks and buses can operate effectively if their carburetors are adapted to the change in fuel.

• • • •

SINCE industrial alcohol can be manufatured from grapes, sugar and cereals, the potential production of Italy or any other country cannot be limited by the action of foreign governments. Alcohol, therefore, would offer Italy a partial escape from the strangling effect of oil sanctions as far as the gasoline requirements of local transport were concerned, cutting these needs in half.

A carburant known as "Usga," sold in northern Brazil, dispenses with the need of gasoline entirely. Usga is made of a mixture of ether, alcohol and castor oil, and although it smells as bad as it sounds it will make a motor go. The manufacture of ether requires only alcohol and sulphuric acid, both of which can be produced in Italy in bulk. If sufficient quantities of castor oil should not be obtainable from the Fascist police, importation of this commodity is not yet affected by sanctions.

In view of the existence of these and other gasoline substitutes, the extension of sanctions to oil would not necessarily inflict undue suffering on the civilian population of Italy. Such "Ersatz" carburants might cause bad tempers among drivers and passengers, but as long as these carburants were available, local communities need not be isolated from the outer world.

• • • •

THE real force of an oil embargo would fall on the Italian army, more particularly on the divisions employed in the invasion of Ethiopia. Military airplanes require high-test gasoline, and the quality of their fuel is an especially vital factor when they must operate at high altitudes and be able to take off from landing fields many thousands of feet above sea level.

High-speed light tanks might also prove unable to use gasoline substitutes under conditinos prevailing in the interior of Ethiopia. Oil-burning troopships and supply vessels would need extensive alterations before they could utilize any other fuel than crude oil.

If oil were shut off from Italy, it is the Italian army of invasion which would suffer the ultimate paralysis, not the civilian population of mountainous and rural districts. Even an oil shortage, necessitating the rationing of Italian bombing planes on the Ethiopian front, would lead directly to decreasing number of African victims and tend inevitably toward shortening the duration of Mussolini's war.

Movie Man, Extra Girl Freed in Morals Case

Los Angeles, Dec. 2 (AP).—Dismissal of morals charges against Dave Allen, former movie casting bureau head, and Gloria Marsh, extra girl, was ordered today by Superior Judge Henry M. Willis.

The dismissal wos recommended by Arthur Veitch, district attorney's deputy, who prosecuted Allen and Miss Marsh on indictments charging them with misconduct in the apartment of Miss June De Long, also a film extra. A jury disagreed in the trial last November.

Harvard's Mather

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

The Lone Geologist.

PROF. KIRTLEY F. MATHER, of Harvard, is a mild, bespectacled and diminutive man who goes puttering about the Harvard yard on his tiptoes in an absent-minded sort of way. He is never so happy as when poring over his photographs and collating his notes, written in a crabbed and scholarly handwriting, in his snug office in the Geological Museum on Oxford street, having gathered these photographs and notes on many an expedition into the geological mysteries of the ancient world. On Saturdays he presides over the dull meetings of the would-be-liberal Twentieth Century Club, introducing with equanimity and humor an amazing variety of traveling platform-performers. He is also a Baptist, but by no means hard-shelled, and a Mason of the thirty-second degree, although you would never suspect it.

Such a gentleman, who has been preoccupied for years with the rather difficult task of reconciling God and Science, is hardly the type one would expect to find leading a revolt single-handed, although any contact with his mind would reveal him as one with an intellect as firm as rockbed and as yielding of chips of wisdom as any mine of learning. Despite his mildness of manner, however, he is the outstanding enemy of fascism in the once proud Commonwealth of Massachusetts, battling with commendable courage the insulting teachers' oath law which has reduced the masters and pastors of that terrain to a virtual slave-state comparable with the facistic regime now in control of the District of Columbia's public schools.

ALTHOUGH a native of Illinois there is a certain Yankee crankiness—or individuality—in Prof. Mather's make-up which refuses to allow him to kow-tow to a dictatorship, despite the fact that 40,000 of his fellow-teachers are signing the pledge without batting an eyelash. The alternative to signing the oath is abnegation of the right to teach in Massachusetts, a right inherent to the Mathers of Massachusetts since the days when old Cotton Mather was warning the unrighteous of hell-fire to come. Prof Mather has not yet been run out of the State on a rail, because he has signed the oath, but the reservations which accompanied his signature are of far greater effect than a blank space would have been.

Dr. Mather is a member of innumerable societies, most of which are vested with a dignity such as would be acceptable even to Richard Underwood Johnson. But, being a scientist and a scholar, he is also on the rolls of the American-Russian Institute for Cultural Relations with the Soviet Union and as such, of course, is obviously working for the breakdown of his own great and glorious country. He refuses to resign his membership in this select club—which probably meets secretly in a cellar and is hounded by the police—because, as he says, "science recognizes no political boundaries."

NOT only has he taken this heretical stand, but he has also declared that he wants it definitely understood that under no circumstances will he transfer from the university to the State the right to judge his fitness to teach. This doesn't sound, somehow, like one who has succumbed to the Soviet lure. It sounds, instead, like a red-blooded, 100 per cent, rugged individualist of the type which came to full blossom not long ago when thousands of otherwise loyal Americans were drinking themselves into cirrhosis of the liver in the name of personal liberty. It's the cry of a man who won't be regimented and it must bring joy to the hearts of those few remaining citizens who, refusing to be alarmed by the false hopes of the Communists, refuse also to be led by the little Hitlers into the concentration camps hysterically set up in the name of the Constitution, God save it.

Kirtley Fletcher Mather might go through this life happily tapping with his little hammer on the sedimentary rock of this earth, and worrying about God's liking for the prognostications of the scientists, without contributing to the sum of human knowledge as greatly as he has by his caustic reservations to the Hitler oath of Massachusetts. For there are plenty of geologists ready and eager to break into the earth's surface in the name of knowledge. There are, unfortunately, too few like Dr. Mather ready to fight the barbarians' efforts to clamp down upon the teachers and to make the spread of wisdom subservient to the political beliefs of demagogues.

HIS lone fight, on the rock-ribbed shores of Massachusetts Bay, to make education safe from dictatorship is something rare and fine and deserving of the vocal approbation of intelligent men and women everywhere. True, the Hitler oath merely commands the teachers to swear fealty to the constitution, but its coercive features savor of tyranny and are bound, in the end, to render education, in the immortal words in the washrooms of the siteamers that used to ply up and down the Maine coast, "both disagreeable and useless."

It's a strange commentary upon us Americans when it takes courage to say that science recognizes no political boundaries and that the State has no right to judge the fitness of a teacher in a private institution. It's strange, too, that a descendant of a great dogmatist should be the one to fight for personal liberty. But it's not half so strange as the fact that 40,000 teachers remain silent, leaving it to this lone geologist to fight for the preservation of their rights.

Tugwell Paints Rural Struggles In Drab Colors

Says 525,000 Families Will Be Rescued by Resettlement.

By the Associated Press.

Paraphrasing the rallying cry of the late Senator Huey P. Long, Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell asserted last night that in the Mississippi Valley, if anywhere, "every man should be a king."

Instead, Tugwell asserted in a radio speech, the "Northern farmer who works for a mortgage and the Southern agriculturalist who works for a landlord alike are tenants and share-croppers."

The resettlement administrator said that traffic "which should flow easily • • • has been warped and chained to swell the profits and importance of distant cities."

Banks and insurance companies, he asserted, "hold title to provinces where, in a well-run economic system, wealth and power and freedom should accumulate as a heritage for our people.

"And year after year the people of the valley are pitted against each other in political conflict where they should stand shoulder to shoulder in defense of their birthright.

Hits Feudal Privilege.

"This peonage has gone on too long. We must as a nation face the supreme reality of geography and give to the people who live in the great valley the heritage which Jefferson and Jackson and Lincoln sought to assure them."

Tugwell lashed out at "feudal privileges" and "vested interests," although devoting most of his address to the work and aims of his agency, which, he said, will care for more than 525,000 farm families.

"It is possible," he said, "to have a new era in terms of assured income, security and contentment at a high standard of living.

"It is possible if we learn to adapt ourselves to the realities of the power age and cease to rely upon the outworn shibboleths of international finance and the pat formulas of nineteenth century economists who thought in terms of feudal privilege and vested interests."

10,000,000 Acres Bought.

He asserted that dream "had substance," however, for it "represented what was practically possible if we could give every man his due and special privilege to neither capital, labor nor consumer."

Tugwell told of struggles of thousands of farm families to earn livings on lands unfit for farming and said that by the end of this year his agency will have bought 10,000,000 acres of such misused land. About 22,000 farm families will be given a chance to move to better lands and an average of about 75,000 men daily will be given work developing the land which is bought, he added.

The process of land adjustment, Tugwell said, "is the basis of a long-time program and must be judged as such, and not as an emergency relief measure to be abandoned with the first economic upturn."

Knox Repeats Plea for Bonus Payment With Relief Billions

Publisher, Candidate for G. O. P. Nomination, Declares $4,800,000,000 Otherwise Will Be Wasted or 'Spent for Partisan Purposes.'

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—Col. Frank Knox, candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, tonight reiterated his stand that the Administration should pay the war veterans' bonus immediately from the remainder of the $4,800,000,000 relief fund instead of allowing the money to be "wasted or used for partisan purposes."

Knox prefaced an address to the annual convention of the Associated Business Papers by clarifying "my position in regard to payment of the veterans' bonus."

"What I would like to see done," he said, "and what ought to be done, is that such part of the remaining $4,000,000,000 as is not necessary for relief should be canceled and not spent at all. And let me stress that direct relief would give the recipient more real relief than all the boondoggling. But we all know the New Deal Administration won't do that. Therefore, I would rather see the veterans prepaid such sums as justly due them out of the $4,000,000,000 than to have it wasted or used for partisan purposes. You may be sure that if it is not paid to the veterans it will be largely wasted or used for partisan purposes."

Opposed Vast Relief Sum.

Knox recalled that he opposed the appropriation of $4,800,000,000 for relief and asserted that it was "probably four times as much as would be needed if relief were distributed on a cash basis."

Of the amount appropriated by Congress, he added, approximately $4,000,000,000 remains unexpended, and, since "prepayment of the bonus is going to be the first legislative proposal considered when Congress reassembles, it is a normal certainty that the New Dealers, with their record of spending, will authorize it."

Hails Supreme Court.

"I say to you in all earnestness that it is my belief that the only body which has kept this Nation from becoming a bureacratic autocracy during the present term of President Roosevelt, has been the Supreme Court of the United States," Knox declared.

And, unlike many critics of, or apologists for, New Deal departures in government, Knox blamed Roosevelt himself—not the Chief Executive's brain trust advisers. Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell came in for scathing criticism, but Knox said this of the President:

"I, for one, do not believe Mr. Roosevelt is a straw man. I thoroughly believe he knows what he wants done. But straw man or strong man, the policies of this Administration are his policies. The New Deal he substituted (for the 1932 Democratic platform) is his deal. The Tugwells of his Administration are his appointees. He has kept them in their seats of authority, and by keeping them gives consent to what they say."

Peace Move Seeks 50,000,000 Signers

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 2.—A campaign to obtain 50,000,000 signatures in all nations that signed the Kellogg Peace Pact, to a petition advocating the eventual abandonment of all arms, was started today by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

Harvard University students were the first asked to sign the document.

Miss Sarah du Pont, cousin of Pierre du Pont, munitions manufacturer, who sold her holdings in the du Pont Co. and became a peace advocate, was among those present at today's meeting.

The petition, league officials said, would be presented to the League of Nations at Geneva in the spring.

The petition asks the governments of the world to cease all increases in armaments, to use existing war machinery to stop conflicts peacefully, and to reduce arms with the aim of eventually abandoning all arms.

AAA Caused Class War, Farmers' Head Asserts

Chicago, Dec. 2 (AP).—Charles H. Conaway, president of the Farmers National Grain Dealers Association, said today the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has failed because it did not "take the consumer into consideration."

Conaway blamed the AAA for "creating the worst class warfare ever instituted in America." He spoke before the annual meeting of executives of the association.

Col. Knox Declines Curran Invitation

Publisher, Economy League at Odds on Bonus.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 2.—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher involved in a discussion with the National Economy League on the question of payment of the veterans' bonus, has declined an invitation to address a league dinner in January.

Correspondence between Col. Knox and Henry H. Curran, League director, disclosed the organization did not agree with the publisher's proposal to pay the bonus out of the $4,800,000,000 work relief fund.

Curran charged Knox with "playing politics," and said payment of the bonus at this time would cost $700,000,000 more.

Huey Long Bill Upheld By Louisiana High Court

New Orleans, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Louisiana Supreme Court today upheld constitutionality of the legislative act passed during Senator Huey Long's time which gave the State administration appointive powers to control the East Baton Rouge Parish police jury, governing body of the parish.

RFC Proposes MOP Merger With Two Lines

By the Associated Press.

Consolidation of the Missouri Pacific, the St. Louis-San Francisco and the Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroads to cut costs and improve service was suggested yesterday in a bulky Reconstruction Finance Corporation report on the Missouri Pacific system.

In five volumes the report dealt in detail with the system's finances, corporate history and physical holdings. The Missouri Pacific Railroad, controlled by Van Sweringen interests, owes the RFC $23,134,800.

"The lines of the Missouri Pacific, Frisco and Katy are so located as to complement one another to a high degree," said the report. "Each carrier would contribute to a consolidation strength in some essential in which the others are weak.

Public Held Protected.

"Total operating expenses would be decidedly reduced. At the same time the interests of the public would be amply protected by the competition of Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Rock Island and many other capable carriers.

"There is every promise of gain and practically no threat of loss in a consolidation of the Missouri Pacific, Frisco and Katy systems."

The report also suggested that the Missouri Pacific should absorb the Texas & Pacific. The Missouri Pacific now holds all the preferred and most of the common stock of the T. & P.

"The specter of poverty," said another part of the report, "has not been a stranger to Missouri Pacific, nor has it been unacquainted with periods of flood and drought and depression."

Can't Pay Dividends.

One "decided detriment" to a balanced growth was listed as the railroad's "inability for many years to produce net earnings sufficient to permit the payment of dividends on capital stock."

"This necessitated the funding of improvements and acquisitions through the sale of bonds, and, working back upon itself, the resultant constant rise in fixed charges has rendered more and more impossible the financing of capital investments through the sale of additional stock."

Any reorganization plan for the Missouri Pacific, it was said, should provide for increased capital expenditures for additions and improvements.

A drop in gross capital expenditures on roads and equipment from $35,000,000 in 1929 to less than $3,000,000 last year was cited.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Season's End.

With the football season over
I can heave a heavy sigh,
For I'm weary of the faces
With expressions "Do or die!"
I am weary of the forcasts
And of alibis and such,
And a lack of coaches' statements
Will not pain me very much.

In the early days of autumn
It was pleasant now and then
To read all about the grid stars
And observe the supermen,
But enough is always plenty
And I feel no deep distress
In the passing of the fullbacks
So ferocious (in the press)!

When I've opened up my paper
Day by day since early fall
I've seen little else but he-men
Doing something with a ball . . .
Plunging, lunging, punting, passing
With their bodies full of welts—
But it's good to know that somewhere
Folks are doing something else.

I have had my fill of pictures
Showing boys with scowling pans
Leaping right out of my paper
As expected by the fans;
It was stirring in October
And I reveled in the stuff,
But around about December
I just know I've had enough.

All-American discussions
Were engaging for a while,
But just now when I detect one
I am glad to flee a mile;
I am weary of the line-ups,
I am weary of the wars,
And I'm glad to know life isn't
Just a bowl of football scores.

Oh, I know the old game's magic
And I've felt its strong appeal;
When the rabid fans get gabby
Well, I know just how they feel;
But a peace of mind and spirit
Is the thing that really counts—
And I can't go on forever
Reading names I can't pronounce.

Yes, the football year is ending,
But I cannot shed a tear
As the broadcasters grow silent
And the experts disappear;
Still it's this that drove me nutty
And it's this that laid me low—
All those dizzy Newsreel Pictures
Of the game ten days ago!

Trouble Ahead.

"We cannot borrow our way out of a depression, but there is such a thing as investing our way into a sounder future."—President Roosevelt. Still, we anticipate a disagreeable reaction when we tell the grandchild that all his burdens are a result of our investing him into a better life.

The President says that in 1933 the great bankers assured him that a national debt of from 55 to 70 billion dollars would be safe. This is entirely likely. At that particular time all anybody was doing was yelling, "Mommer! I swallowed something! Get a doctor at any cost!"

The Anti-Saloon League announces that its campaign to bring back prohibition will be conducted like a football game. "We may forward pass or we may buck the line," says an official. The only certain thing is that it will be the same old kicking game.

Played on a dry field and without, of couse, any fullbacks.

Kelley of Yale.

The latest story of Larry Kelley, famous Yale football star, involves a recent game. The foe had consistently boxed up Kelly, who wasn't performing very successfully. Along about the third period, a member of the opposing 11 helped him off the turf and said, "what's the matter, Kelly? You don't seem to be saying much today." "Oh," replied Kelly, "can you fellows understand English?"

It would seem a little wasteful if the China Clipper has to fly back a postcard from China on the ground it had been indistinctly addressed.

The depression must be over. This year mother tried to make soup from the turkey bones only twice.

Now that the WPA is to build birdhouses in Jersey City on Federal funds, we await the announcement of a campaign to bring back the broader life to English sparrows.

Civic Federation Will Act on Proposal for Cut in Light Rates.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 800. Clarendon, Va.

Thursday is the deadline for payment of all county and States taxes to save the penalty of 5 per cent added to all unpaid bills, County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse announced last night.

Jesse reported that a total of $135,828 of this year's taxes had been paid up to the closing of his office last Saturday. This is an increase over the same period for last year of $37,701, and far exceeds the record for any previous year.

A resolution asking the Virginia State Corporation Commission why it opposes extension of electric lines of the Braddock Light & Power Co., Potomac Electric Power Co. subsidiary, into Arlington County, Va., was adopted at last night's meeting of the Arlington County Public Utilities Commission.

The resolution also asked the Braddock company to file a schedule of rates for the entire county with the corporation commission, which had previously requested the company not to extend its service beyond that part of the county for which it had filed a schedule.

The commission is anxious for the Pepco subsidiary to be allowed to furnish power throughout the county. It was pointed out that its domestic rates are less than half of rates charged by the Virginia Public Service Co., which now serves most of the county's consumers.

In another resolution the commission requested the county board to ask Leon Arnold, bus line operator, to reduce the fare from the county courthouse to Rosslyn from 10 cents to 5 cents.

Improvement of all roads along which sewers have been installed and on aproximately 30 miles of other county roads is rapidly nearing completion, County Manager Roy S. Bradens said. South Courthouse road, between Hatfield and Columbia pike, also will be improved before the end of the year, he said.

Action on recommendations of its special committee seeking reduction in electric light rates, and an appeal to the county board and Chamber of Commerce to join in the movement, will feature the meeting of the Arlington County Civic Federation tonight. The meeting will be held in the Lyon Park Community House at 8 o'clock.

The resolution, adopted by the committee of the federation following a conference with officials of the Potomac Electric Light & Power Co., urges that the State corporation commission be requested to grant the power company permission to extend its lines throughout Arlington County.

Chance Buchanan, chairman of the committee, stated that although he expected the federation to approve the committee recommendations, the request probably would not be made to the State corporation commission until the new county board takes office January 1.

Election of officers and consideration of a series of legislative proposals for submission at the next session of the General Assembly will conclude the meeting.

Reports received from Sanitary Engineer Richard Wirt shows sewer installations along the following roads in the county have been completed, and homeowners may now make their house connections:

Lines in Arlington on Columbia pike west of Foxcroft, South Cleveland and South Edgewood streets between Columbia pike and South Thirteenth street, Eleventh and Twelfth streets south between Edgewood and Cleveland streets, South Thirteenth street from Cleveland street to 400 feet west of South Highland street, South Rolfe street from Columbia pike south one block, South Sixteenth street from South Nelson street to Doctors Run, South Quincy, Pollard and Oakland streets from Fourteenth to Eighteenth street, South Nelson street from Fourteenth to Sixteenth streets, South Highland street from Columbia pike to Fourteenth to Sixteenth street, South Highland street from Columbia pike to Fourteenth street, and South Monroe street from Columbia pike to Twelfth street south.

Lines in Clarendon on North Kenmore, North Jackson, North Ivy and North Irving streets between Wilson boulevard and Sixth street north. Lines on Eighth, Ninth and Tenth streets north and Ninth road between North Irving and North Highland streets and Wilson Boulevard, between Jackson and North Irving streets.

Lines in Cherrydale in the following streets:

Lee highway from Lee Heights to Lyon Village, North Taylor street from Lee highway to Fifteenth street north, North Stafford street from Lee highway to Spout Run, North Randolph street from Twentieth road to Spout Run, North Quebec street from Twentieth street to Spout Run, North Quincy street from Lee highway to North Thirteenth street, North Fourteenth street from Nelson street to Quincy street, North Pollard street from Lee highway south one block, North Stafford street from Lee highway to Twenty-first road north from North Stafford street to Lee highway, North Quebec street north from Lee highway one-half block, North Oakland street from Lee highway north 200 feet, North Monroe street from Lee highway to Twenty-first street, North Lincoln street from Lee highway to Twenty-second street, North Twenty-first street from North Kenmore to North Monroe street, North Kenmore street from Twenty-first street to Twenty-third street, Twenty-third road from North Kenmore street to North Jackson street, east and west of Glebe road from Fifteenth street north to Sixteenth street north, North Sixteenth street from Glebe road to North Wakefield street and North Wakefield street from Sixteenth street to Seventeenth street.

According to the report, all property owners will be required to engage the services of a registered plumber to do all work except the actual tapping of the lateral sewer line, which will be done by the county sewer department.

Youthful Convict Escapes Trap; Hideout Sought.

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 2.—Dwight Beard, 25-year-old college-educated killer and thief, was believed back in North Carolina tonight and State prison authorities pressed a search for the elusive fugitive from a life term.

Oscar Pitts, acting director of the penal division, revealed that officers for the past week have been hot on the trail of the former Lenoir, N. C., boy who has an astonishing crime record despite his youthful years.

Last night Beard escaped a trap at Greenville, S. C., and Buncombe County officers took up the hunt for him, believing he possibly was hiding in western North Carolina.

Fairfax County Farms Gaining, Census Shows

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 243, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The number of farms in Fairfax County, Va., has shown a substantial increase over the last five years and the size of farms has decreased during the same period, according to figures from the 1935 Federal farm census.

The figures from the present census show there are now in operation 2,001 farms in the county, compared with 1,244 in 1930. Farm valuations, including buildings, are set at $15,185,689 for 1935, and $16,897,827 in 1930.

There has been a decided increase in livestock on farms since the 1930 census was taken. Horses and colts were listed at 2,395; mules and mule colts, 205; cattle, 12,835; cows and heifers, 2 years old and over, 8,713; sheep and lambs, 1,056, and 13,614 hogs and pigs.

An increase in dairying, which is the most important farm activity in the county, is indicated by the larger number of cows reported in 1935, compared with 1930, the figures being 8,713, as compared with 6,586 in 1930, an increase of more than 30 per cent.

In 1934 the acreage of crop land harvested was 35,179 acres, an increase of 1,270 acres in five years. For the different individual crops the acreage increase took a sharp upward jump.

The increase in the number of farms in operation and the decrease in their size has been taken to indicate a large number of persons are taking up small farm acreage throughout the county as a part-time activity in connection with their other work.

The Lee District Improvement Association has named the following judges of the essay contest sponsored by the organization: Former Senator Joseph L. Bristow, of Annandale; Mrs. Elsie A. Davis, supervisor of elementary schools of Fairfax County, and Martin T. Webb, of Annandale. The association plans to distribute Christmas baskets during Christmas week.

The annual Christmas bazaar and luncheon given by the Day Branch Guild and Auxiliary of the Old Falls Episcopal Church at Falls Church will be held today in the parish hall.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the St. James Parochial School will give a bingo party tomorrow evening in the St. James School Hall at West Falls Church.

The room mothers of the elementary school at Vienna, Va., will hold a tea and Christmas bazaar tomorrow afternoon in the Vienna school.

Group Will Open Jewish Colleges

Young Israel Heads Reveal Plans for Seven.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Dec. 2.—Officers of Young Israel, a Jewish youth movement, today announced a plan for the opening of rotating colleges for branches of their organization in seven cities of the United States and Canada.

One already is in operation in New York, serving 665 students, said Moses H. Hoenig, New York, president.

Four-night-a-week courses in Jewish philosophy, Hebrew, Jewish history, codes and ceremonies will be established, Hoenig announced, in Chicago, Cleveland, Louisville, Rochester, Detroit, Toronto and Cincinnati. Faculty members will be graduates of American universities and classes are expected to begin January 12.

Hoenig estimated 10,000 students would be enrolled within two years, requiring 250 instructors, at an estimated expenditure of $35,000 yearly. Members of the faculty will "rotate" in their assignments, Hoenig explained, adding that plans call for instruction on subjects to be simultaneous in all cities.

Jouett Shouses Entertain For the Whitney Seymours

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse entertained at a delightful afternoon and early evening party in their home in Georgetown Sunday. Instead of the cards reading "from 5 until 7 o'clock" guests were invited to linger in the pleasant atmosphere until 8 o'clock and many of them stayed even after that hour. For there was an orchestra and dancing, an unusual idea at a Sunday reception, but one which was greatly enjoyed by the guests.

The Shouse home is another of those lovely old houses which have been restored so successfully in Georgetown, and boasts a drawing room, once two large rooms, which reaches the entire length of the house. On Sunday most of the furniture had been pushed back against the walls to make room for the dancing. Rugs had been removed to show the beautiful old inlaid floor, and vast mirrors over the two fireplaces in the room reflected the gay couples who danced or sat in groups to watch the dancers. In the library across the hall others gathered to talk, while in the dining room crowds surrounded the table where there was a magnificent buffet of Virginia hams, salads, ices, cakes and sandwiches.

The party was given for young Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Seymour, of New York, who had been spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. Shouse. "Lola" and "Whit" are always welcome guests in Washington, having made their home here for several years when Mr. Seymour was assistant to Judge Thomas D. Thacher, who at that time was Solicitor General. The Seymours occupied the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Colt deWolf, just up the street from the Shouse home, and there they entertained delightfully for their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Seymours occupied the beautiful home for brief visits and are usually the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Shouse.

During their stay here last week Mr. and Mrs. Seymour spent much of their time attending the races, and the Sunday party was arranged hurriedly to give their friends a chance to see them before they returned to New York yesterday.

Mrs. Shouse wore a gown of black velvet made with a long, flowing skirt and long fitted sleeves. She had a corsage of beautiful white orchids, with deep red tongues, perched on her shoulder. Mrs. Seymour, who has the gayest black eyes and shiniest black hair, was in a gown of silver lame, fashioned on tailored lines, with a spray of tiny white orchids pinned at the throat.

The Prochniks Attend.

Guests came and went during the afternoon, and many just settled themselves to enjoy the whole time of the party. Mrs. Demarest Lloyd was there in smart black, with a shoulder cape of broadtail; Mrs. Albert Dewey, small and dark, arrived rather late, wearing her usual black, very smart, and topped with a voluminous mink coat; the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik were there, the latter in black, with a small hat of bright blue egrets. Mrs. John Caswell, in tweeds, was answering innumerable questions as to the whereabouts of the lovely Betsy, who, it seems, is suffering from a sprained ankle, twisted in the crowds leaving the Army and Navy game Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett lingered late, the beautiful Mrs. Garrett most attractive in a woolen suit of dark steel blue, made with a shoulder cape banded with dark sable, and a Russian turban of the same fur. The Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska were seen chatting with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment, and Mme. Petroff, wife of the Minister of Bulgaria. And nearby were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr. Mrs. McKenny Mallan, looking very smart in black crepe trimmed with touches of bright green, came in late from a concert; and tall Dr. "Ned" Ellerson was glimpsed dancing with young Joan Dodd, daughter of the hostess, who wore a suit of bright tweed. Young William Dodd also joined the party and seemed to enjoy a dance with his mother. It was a charming party and an ideal way to spend a cold Sunday afternoon and evening.

Senorita Alfaro Bows to Society On December 23

Pan-American Union to Be the Scene of Brilliant Debutante Party.

Senorita Amelita Alfaro, attractive daughter of the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, is the diplomatic debutante of the season, but until today the date of her debut had not been announced. Now the Minister and Senora de Alfaro have issued invitations for a dance Monday evening, December 23, at the Pan American Union at 10:30 o'clock, when they will introduce their daughter to Capital society.

Senorita Alfaro has entertained at numerous luncheons and small dinners for the debutantes during the season, and hers will be the outstanding debut of the winter. For the Pan American Union is the most beautiful place for a party in Washington, and only the privileged may entertain there. The guests at the dance will include principally members of the younger set, although members of the Diplomatic Corps and some officials also have been invited.

Because of the size of the party, Senora de Alfaro has decided to send cards of admission to the guests upon receipt of their acceptances, so some of the careless members of the younger set will miss a brilliant dance if they are not punctilious in answering the invitation.

3 Debutantes Of Washington Attend German

75 Presented in Annual Event Continuing Old Tradition.

Last evening some 75 debutantes were formally presented to society at the first german of the Baltimore Bachelors Cotillion, held, following a tradition of many years, in the old Lyric Opera House.

The scene last evening was little changed from that of more than 100 years ago, when debutantes danced the polka and minuet. The same handsome old brocades hung from the high windows and doors, and the old gold candelabra again served to light the brilliant scene.

This season only three debutantes went from Washington to attend the ball—Miss Miriam Scott, Miss Yolande de Mauduit and Miss Marie Hall Tawresey. Miss Tawresey is the daughter of Commander and Mrs. Alfred Tawresey, and though a student at Ogontz School, near Philadelphia, has spent the past week-end with her parents. Before the ball she was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Hall Harris, jr., of Baltimore, and her escort for the evening was their son, Mr. Hall Harris 3d.

Hall Pleasants, Dr. Pleasants being one of the board of governors of the cotillion. Men Will Find Handy Presser A Time Saver

By Ruth Anne Davis.

RECENTLY a men's fashion editor submitted a questionnaire to debutantes in several cities to ascertain just what details they considered most important about male attire. Almost unanimously the young women emphasized well defined creases in trousers.

And certainly there's a lot to be said about creases. Take the young man whose budget strains to a breaking point every time a suit goes out for a pressing; take another young man who has one party suit that needs attention several times a week; or for that matter take the wife who worries herself gray haired trying to keep her husband's suit up to sartorial standards—surely, all of them would be delighted to hear about the handy trouser presser that takes but a minute to use and turns out real tailored effects.

This in all truth is a clever little gadget which looks for all the world like a cross between a curling iron and a double-bladed hatchet. You plug in the wire and it heats immediately.

You insert the sleeve or trouser leg between the two blades which automatically clamp down, and then run it slowly down the whole length. There's no danger of scorches or burns, for the heat is thermatically controlled. When the job is complete (and remember the whole operation takes only a few minutes' then presto, there's a grand crease.

The same presser is ideal also for pressing ties and in fact, completely rehabilitating wrinkled suits, coats and all.

It's bound to save you many dollars in pressing bills. Once you've used it, you'll fall in line with all those who wonder how they ever got along without it.

The price? A modest $1.50. Incidentally it works on A. C. or D. C. current. Also, it's unconditionally guaranteed!

Outstanding Beauty Kit.

THERE are so many beauty kits on the market it's difficult to keep up with them all. But there's one that stands out! It's a little white pigskin affair that's the ideal size for keeping in one's desk drawer.

You'd never dream from a casual glance that it could hold all that it does. Compactly fitted inside of it are—rouge, eyeshadow, lipstick, eyebrow pencil, liquid powder base, protective cream, powder, skin tonic, tissue cream and cleansing cream. What more could anyone want?

The office worker finds these kits of special interest. They take up little space, and enable her to keep her skin in first-rate condition. In the afternoon before she leaves the office, she has all the requisites on hand for giving her face a quick but complete going over.

Three-Piece Dresser Sets.

HERE'S ANOTHER suggestion to add to your Christmas list: the three-piece dresser sets, costing only $1.95. They include comb, brush, mirror, and they come in black, cream, green, blue, trimmed in a nontarnishable chrome.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE'VE argued long into the night over the question of what is beauty. But we never found the answer. A friend of ours who buys for a department store suggested one very good idea on the subject. She said it was anything that gave pleasure . . . and went on to expand the idea thus—suppose a lady had something in her home that she loved and enjoyed. That made it beautiful, even though another person might not care for it at all. On the other hand, if the second person owned it, it would not be beautiful because it would not be giving her pleasure.

This maybe explains something of the reason for the way fashions look to us. Some years one thing seems very beautiful . . . another year it looks terrible.

All this is a good way for us to straddle the fence in response to a request that we settle an argument between a husband and wife. He said that each piece in an upholstered set of furniture should be covered in the same material. She said they should each be covered in a different material. We say either is correct. A few seasons back it was more popular to have all the pieces in a set covered to match . . . just now the style runs a little more to variety in the coverings. It depends on personal preference. Maybe in this case it would be nice to have the two chairs to match and the sofa contrasting . . . then both he and she would win the point.

Has Novel Peace Plan

MRS. GRACE L. OSWALT.

Woman Urges U. S. of World As Peace Plan

Impounding Foreign Debts to Finance Anti-War Machinery Proposed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—An Indiana housewife and mother of eight children—Mrs. Grace L. Oswalt—believes she has a solution to a problem over which statesmen have been fretting for centuries. It's a very simple matter to end war, insists Mrs. Oswalt, who has come to New York to explain her new "business way" peace plan. "All it takes is a little clever management," she said.

Mrs. Oswalt proposes to allow foreign nations to pay into the International Bank at Basle the war debts owed the United States. This peace chest would be a nucleus for the demomratic support of the League of Nations, the World Court, the International Red Cross and all other peace agencies now in existence. These would be utilized as part of the machinery of a "United States of the World," which would guarantee economic security to all nations and thereby eliminate the need of armaments. The President of the United States of the World would be elected by popular vote of all peoples of the earth.

"It's all perfectly simple," Mrs. Oswalt said. "It's really a bargain and everybody is always ready for a bargain. We give up the war debts which we would never collect anyhow. We lose our reputation as mercenary and grasping, and the other nations lose the stigma of debtors. This money is used to advance the common interest of all nations, ourselves included.

"I claim this is a business way to world peace on which both the militarist and the pacifist may agree and which may be accomplished by the initiative of the United States."

Mrs. Oswalt gave a broadcast of her peace plan at Town Hall here. Her home is at Lafayette, Ind., where she manages a woman's dormitory for Purdue University.

Study of Other People Urged For Success in Business World

W. L. Loman, G. W. Psychology Instructor, Says Introspection Won't Improve Personality, Most Important Factor in Holding Job.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE WOMAN WHO SUCCEEDS in business generally forgets the maxim of the ancients, "Know thyself." Instead, she follows Menander's injunction, "The saying, 'Know thyself,' is silly. It is much more practical to say, 'Know other people.'"

William L. Loman, psychology instructor at George Washington University and personnel director of a local department store, agrees with Menander—particularly where this problem of getting and keeping a job is concerned. And he also agrees with Miss Jessie H. Samson, office manager for a large New York law firm, who recently declared: "Personal appearance goes 75 per cent of the way in getting a job."

Yesterday at his office, however, he went a step further than Mrs. Samson's statement, and explained that "Personal appearance, in this case, also includes personality. After all, pleasing behavior can offset many flaws in appearance and can, in many cases, make up for lack of ability. In other words, personality is the most important factor in business success. But it can't be improved by introspection.

How to Determine Value.

"Studying yourself won't help because every person in the world is a stranger to himself and completely deluded about his potentialities, his value to an employer. The only way you can determine your worth is by the response you get from other persons—not only your boss, but your other associates, and the individuals whom you serve."

If your personality clashes with every respective employer; if after you get a job, you are one of those persons who "simply can't get along" with others, the fault is probably your own, Mr. Loman believes. "But self-analysis won't correct it," he said, "because more than likely the fault is the result of too much looking within and not enough looking without."

He further pointed out that 75 per cent of the failures in business are caused by unpleasing personalities, rather than lack of ability. "It all comes down to the wear and tear of one individual on another," he said. "You can't make over individuals with whom you work, you can't change your boss' personality, but you can mould your own to advantage."

In this connection he mentioned the importance of "behavior control." This, he believes, should be carried from the home to the outside world, particularly the business world. Its success or failure depends largely on whether the individual is mature or still a baby."

Why Workers Lose Out.

The infant cries in his cradle, probably for no other reason than to exercise his lungs, Mr. Loman explained. "The mother takes him in her arms, cuddles him, probably rocks him to sleep. It's pleasant. So pleasant in fact the baby tries iit again, with the same result. Before long the habit is established. So when the baby wants to be cuddled he cries.

"Unfortunately, many persons who enter the business world are not mature, either in attitudes or actions. Having inflated ideas of their importance, they apply for positions, but if they are lucky enough to get a job they soon lose out. Why? Chiefly because when something goes wrong, their lack of 'behavior control' comes to the fore. They are children again—employing much the same tactics that gained them a cuddling in childhood. They fly into tantrums, become overbearing with those around them, are, figuratively, 'cry babies.' But the average boss doesn't have time to soothe them, to pamper or pacify them. So sooner or later they are out on the streets looking for another job."

"Every person has two personalities—his permanent and his temporary one. You can't therefore, say your personality is set, like concrete. It is mutable, may be changed often and much, depending on the need of a change, and the desire on the part of the individual. No matter how unpleasing one's personality is, he can get a grip on his behavior, can make himself over enough to get along with his associates, if he is sensitive to the response of other people. But if he continues to study himself istead of those around him, he might as well give up or find a job where he can work in seclusion."

Trial and Error Method.

Because employers are so different in their likes and dislikes, Mr. Loman believes it is virtually impossible to set down rules for jobseekers or employes. "The trial and error method is the only means for discovering what bosses like. If after applying for one job after another, a woman has been wearing conservative clothes—a dark tailored suit, black oxfords and a dark hat—and still hasn't landed a position, she might try a red or blue hat or a bright flower on her coat. Perhaps she needs a colorful touch to bring out the high lights of her personality."

Appearance counts much in building a personality of value in the business world, Mr. Loman said. "But you can't trust your mirror entirely. It's much better to judge by the response of other people. It all goes back to one rule: Don't study yourself, study other people. In this way, if any, you can eventually come to know yourself."

Winston Churchill's Daughter Is Actress

London (AP).—Miss Sarah Churchill, 21-year-old daughter of Winston Churchill, has become a chorine.

"My parents are putting up no objection," she told newspapermen. "I made up my mind to become an actress when I was in socks."

So slim, auburn-haired Sarah has started rehearsing for a new West End show as one of "Cochran's young ladies."

Atmosphere Of Home Made For Incurables

Board of ManagersComposed of Women Supervises Institution Here.

ONE OF THE FEW institutions in the country supervised by a board of managers made up entirely of women, the Washington Home for Incurables has been under the direction of prominent Washingtonians since it was established in 1887.

Mrs. Archibald Hopkins, president of the home for many years, was succeeded on her recent death by Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, who is the seventh president of the board. Actively interested in the institution for a long time, Mrs. Wallace has devoted most of her time to it for the last three years.

Assisted by Mrs. Robert S. Chew, who has been treasurer of the home for a number of years, and a competent group of managers, Mrs. Wallace is working diligently to make the Home for Incurables "a real home rather than an institution." "We are trying especially," she said yesterday, "to make the patients feel that they are not in a hospital, nor an institution, but in a home where they may enjoy and profit by their associations, where in proportion to their strength they may entertain themselves as they wish, and where they may work or rest as their desires dictate."

Many Privileges Granted.

In keeping with the effort to maintain the home atmosphere, individuals are allowed to use their own furniture in their rooms if they wish. The men may find projects to occupy them in the workshop where chairs are repaired, furniture is painted and good cabinet work is done. Women are permitted to occupy themselves with fancy work of all kinds. Crocheted mats and other dainty handwork that results are sometimes used as gifts and sometimes sold.

"One man who has a good deal of imagination and ingenuity has become something of an architect," Mrs. Wallace said. "Using cigar boxes as his material, he has fashioned quaint houses, miniature bungalows and cabins. His occupation is both entertaining and profitable.

"We who are interested in the home are particularly grateful that it is a happy place, and we are especially proud of the fact that in some cases patients who were admitted as incurables have been able to leave the home and earn a living."

She further explained that about a third of the total number of patients are charity cases; that children as well as adults are admitted; that a competent staff of highly trained persons comprises the pay roll; that "the home is very fortunate in having as dean of its medical staff Dr. M. C. Dollman, who has given to the home his time and service free of charge for more than 25 years;" that during the year ending November 1, 73 general patients and 15 cancer patients were admitted to the home, and that "there is always a long waiting list."

Help Gravely Needed.

One of the few District of Columbia institutions not in the CommunityChest, the Home for Incurables is supported by trust funds, general contributions donor memberships, bequests and legacies, annual subscriptions and a small appropriation from Congress. Mrs. Wallace stressed that "help is gravely needed for the home at this time," and that "gifts of money and food are always gratefully received."

Long identified with philanthropic projects, Mrs. Wallace believes one gains much satisfaction from helping the helpless. Since 1906 she has been actively interested in providing for the afflicted, particularly patients at the Home for Incurables. During the war she devoted much time to work at the Walter Reed Hospital, and was an outstanding charity worker in France from 1919 to 1921, when her husband was United States Ambassador to that country.

Among the officers and board members assisting Mrs. Wallace are Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Miss Bessie J. Kibbey, Mrs. Henry W. Watson, Mrs. C. A. Richmond, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs E. R. Finkenstaedt, Mme. Vurpillot, Miss Isabel Sedgley, Mrs. Robert S. Chew, Mrs. A. Archbold, Mrs. John C. Boyd, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Miss Julia D. Strong and Mrs Robert W. Bliss.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Foreign Service School Student Soon to Be Married Would Exchange Tutoring Services of Self and Bride for Room and Board.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: As the party of the first part of a pair very soon to be married, may I take this means of asking your advice and help? We are a young couple, the better (or feminine half of which is 22 years of age and newly possessed of an A. B. degree. The lesser (or masculine) half as represented by myself is 23 and in his fourth year at Georgetown University.

After deferring our marriage for some time because of economic reason, we have finally reached the conclusion that further delay may result in a tragic and futile waste of the best years of our lives. The resolution to face life together brings us hard up against the fact that we must, in some way, arrange to support ourselves.

I hold a Government job, but it doesn't pay well enough to support us both and keep me in school. To meet the situation we have devised a plan. We would like your opinion of our plan, and if you think it is sound, your help in putting it over.

• • • •

We wish to exchange our joint services as tutors for room and board. Both my fiancee and I have a thorough knowledge of Spanish and French. In addition, she knows German and I know Italian and have a speaking command of Serbian. We are both well-grounded in English grammar and literature and in other basic cultural subjects. I have had long training in public speaking and in various phases of physical training and hygiene. As reference, we can gives the names of local university professors and other professional persons.

• • • •

Now, do you think our plan a good one? If so, we are in desperate need of contacts through which we can make the proper connections. If you can, in any way, put us in touch with some one with whom we might work this thing out, you will have done much to give us a badly-needed start.

ENGAGED.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR ENGAGED: On the face of it, your plan seems a good one providing you can contact a family which might see fit to employ the services of a couple as tutor and governess under such an arrangement.

• • • •

It has been suggested to me that Prof. Leon Dostert, head of the Romance Languages Department of Georgetown University, might prove your best adviser. I feel sure, too, that you would find a sympathetic friend in Dr. Thomas Healy, dean of the foreign service school at Georgetown University. Letters of introduction to the proper personages at the Spanish, French, German and Italian embassies here might serve to call your qualifications and ambitions to the attention of those who could be instrumental in placing you.

• • • •

On the other hand, it might be wise for your fiancee to use her California citizenship in seeking employment with the Government in Washington. Her educational background coupled with proper indorsements should make it possible for her to find at least a self-sustaining job here. In that event, you might relinquish your Government berth—supposing the question is raised as to either the legality or the propriety of both husband and wife holding Government jobs—in favor of a part-time tutoring post, either in a local school or in a private home. You might find such a place through one of the day schools or boarding schools here, as, for instance, the Friends School, the Landon School, or the Washington School for Boys.

Waning Season Danger Period From Shingles

Rest and Easily Digested Food Are Essential in Treatment.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WE ARE still in the dark as to the exact cause of shingles or herpes zoster. We do not know whether it is a single (not shingle) disease or a combination of diseases, or whether the symptoms are merely the manifestations of some underlying infection or deficiency. It may have a definite relation to chickenpox or, in fact, to any one of several diseases characterized by skin eruptions. Some authors hold that shingles is the match that kindles the blaze of a chickenpox epidemic. Again, it is contended that either disease—chickenpox or shingles—can cause the other, and many cases have been observed in which chickenpox among children in a family has been followed by shingles in one or more of the adult members. If herpes is due to an infection, a filterable virus is probably responsible. At any rate, inflammation of certain nerves and ganglia accounts for the symptoms.

Repeated Outbreaks Reported.

The condition is usually contagious, and repeated epidemic outbreaks have been reported. It is more likely to occur during the change of season—between autumn and winter or between winter and spring—than during the very warm or the very cold periods. Those past middle life are affected more frequently than children, although persons of all ages are mildly susceptible.

How long does shingles last? Unfortunately the disease does not run a definite course, that is, of a new days or a few weeks. It seems to have a will of its own, utterly disregardful of precedent or law. Some cases will recover within a few days, while in others the symptoms may persist for as long as a year.

Life Rarely Endangered.

While herpes zoster rarely endangers life, the condition is often attended with excruciating pain. Rest in bed is important and the entire program should be directed toward securing an efficient functioning of all glands and organs of the body. The diet should be one that is easily digested, and a high state of nutrition is desirable. About the only medicine that will be required is some form of hypnotic for the control of pain. For local applications to the inflamed areas of skin, pure, undiluted alcohol is recommended. There seems to be no specific for relief of symptoms, although extract of the pituitary gland is reported to be of value in shortening the duration of the disease, lessening the pain, and reducing the amount of skin involvement.

Double-Duty Dinner Dresses in Favor; Metal Cloth or Lame Tops Are Leaders

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—A gay deceiver if ever there was one—this double duty dress that's rating so much fashion applause this season! You arrive . . . correctly dressed for cocktails and informal dinner. Then the crowd decides to go on to the theater and a club. So off with the jacket . . . and voila! You emerge sleek and decollete enough to the Queen of the Night!

Shimmering metal cloth or lame tops are easily the favorites for these two-timing dinner dresses. Sometimes the jacket is dark and conservative . . . only to reveal a lame top when it's whipped off. Sometimes the dresses are all velvet . . . sometimes all metallic, like molten gold or silver columns. Steel metal is new and exciting . . . and quite Crusader-ish in effect. Heavy sheers appear on the scene, too. But there's a fashion accent on metallics these frosty nights that adds plenty of glamour to the evening picture!

The two ladies sketched above at the left are wearing two versions of the same dress. One with the jacket . . . one without. Observe the startling change! The jacket has short, puffed sleeves, young and flippant looking. An effect heightened by the high neckline. When she whips off the lame jacket—presto! a slim, shirred sheath—sophisticated as a Noel Coward play.

The high boat shaped neckline—often accented with jeweled clips (that's one sketched at the extreme right), has swung into great favor lately, though there's also a tendency toward necklines that fall away quite perilously in front—the tip of the "V" being filled in with matching artificial flowers.

Jeweled belts appear importantly on the evening scene, too. Jeweled belt buckles, or whole jeweled belts of multicolored stones that twinkle blithely away—and lend an animation and a sparkle to the evening scene—and to the lady wearing them!

Past Rich in Beauty Pointers, Elizabeth Arden Declares

MODERN WOMEN may well look to the past for beauty pointers, Miss Elizabeth Arden believes.

Miss Arden flew to Washington yesterday from New York to be present at the preview in Jelleff's little theater of the mural "Pageant of Beauty," done for her country home by Mrs. Clara Fargo Thomas, noted painter.

"The women of other ages can be inspirations to us today," Miss Arden said. "They had so many obstacles to conquer in their quest for personal beauty that modern women do not have. But they were brave pioneers!"

"Take the Egyptian Queen Nefititi," she continued glancing at Mrs. Thomas' drawing of the royal beauty seated at her dressing table gazing into a metal hand mirrow. "She had to use kohl, or a kind of crude charcoal for mascara and eye shadow, but since history refers to her as one of the most beautiful women of her country, she undoubtedly used it well."

Miss Arden then turned to the drawing of Cleopatra. "Of course women of all times have admired her," she said. "She stands for the epitome of feminine cleverness. Not only did she make the most of her beauty but her personality too!"

There was Mme. de Pompadour also who might serve as a beauty inspiration, Miss Arden observed. "Madame was scrupulously careful about her toilet, was known for her clear pink and white complexion, and capped these physical charms by her social graces."

Another charmer shown in the murals and pointed out by Miss Arden was Mme. de Stael.

"She was a woman who knew that beauty was not alone in appearance but in manner, too," she continued. "We may learn of her that listening well and graciously is a real art."

Another beauty cited was Napoleon's Josephine. "From her we should learn that even though we grow older we need not loose our beauty," Miss Arden said.

A large number of Washington women attended the preview. The fresco will be on exhibition the rest of the week. It was shown first last summer in London at the Silver Jubilee and recently was exhibited in New York. It will be shown in many of the larger cities of the United States before it is placed in Miss Arden's country residence.

The fresco was executed at the request of Miss Arden as historical proof of her theory that "any woman can be beautiful and stay beautiful indefinitely."

TODAY, and through Saturday, December 7th, Madame Medea Ball, direct from Elizabeth Arden's Paris salon, will be here to assist in showing Miss Arden's mural . . . and to give special lectures on beauty at 11:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M. daily.

Woman's quest for beauty through the ages . . . from Cleopatra's time to the present . . . is depicted in this strikingly original decoration painted by Clara Fargo Thomas for Miss Arden's country home. A treat not to be missed by beauty lovers and art connoisseurs!

Unusual and Inexpensive Packages for Christmas Presents Can Be Made at Home

Jars of Jelly And Fruit Cake Are Fine Gifts

Coffee Can Easily Fashioned Into an Attractive Candy Box.

CONVERSATION at the bridge table had turned to Christmas—how quickly it comes upon us once Thanksgiving has passed, the problem it presents in what to give and how to make the budget stretch to cover all our wants.

"We had lots of lovely presents under our tree last year," one of the players remarked, "expensive things, nice things, things that we really wanted, yet the gift that has lingered longest in our memory was a package that came from the cousins out in Arkansas. They haven't much money and we hadn't expected them to send anything at all, yet the package was under the tree and we were terribly curious as to what it could contain.

"We opened it first. Wrapped in plain white paper, the inner package was adorned with ground pine and sprigs of mistletoe. 'Charlie picked this in our woods,' a note attached to one twig read. We unwrapped a bottle labeled 'Blackberry Jam,' and the card supplemented, 'the girls picked the wild berries for this jam last summer.' Another jar was marked 'Apple Jelly,' and the accompanying note said: 'Ann, who is now 12, made this jelly herself with apples from the tree by the kitchen door.'"

A Practical Suggestion.

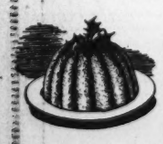
Now there was a Christmas gift that fulfilled its purpose of spreading good will and yet met the requirements of the family that could not go out and buy the lovely, tempting gifts that the stores are offering. It offers a practical Christmas suggestion that can be adapted to our personal needs. We may not have an apple tree growing by our door; we may have more money to spend in the shops than this Arkansas farm family; but we can give gifts of homemade food, attractively wrapped, to friends who will appreciate them.

Homemade candies may be your first thought for a Christmas package for some of your friends. Here is a novel as well as an inexpensive box that any woman can make at home. When your homemade candy goes sallying forth with your Christmas message in this little box it will look quite as smart as the intriguing packages purchased in Washington's best candy shop.

The container is a disguised 1 pound coffee can. To make it, remove the paint from the can with paint remover or by boiling it a few minutes in a very strong solution of washing powder. Dry carefully and repaint it with two coats of white enamel and trim at the top and bottom with two coats of red enamel. Add a lacing of slim green cord, if you wish to carry out the Christmas color scheme, and the drum box is completed. Line the box with wax paper or tin foil and fill with candies made by your favorite recipes.

Homemade jellies, marmalades and preserves also make excellent Christmas gifts. The young bride of a few months will be tickled to death to receive a box of these small jars of homemade delicacies. You might devise a Christmas card for the box bearing the recipes for each kind of jelly included in your packages.

Christmas puddings, the steamed varieties, of course, make delightful Christmas gifts. They may be steamed, as suggested elsewhere on the food page, in 1-pound baking powder cans. After cooling wrap each pudding in heavy waxed paper, then in colored tissue or silver or gold paper, and again wrap in a covering of cellophane. Seal the packages at each end with Christmas seals and insert a sprig of holly in each pudding with a greeting card.



Dorothea Duncan has prepared a special bulletin on candy and winter marmalade recipes that can be made up especially for the Christmas gift box. For your copy write to her in care of The Washington Post, inclosing your name, address and a stamp.

Make Yule Gifts Gay With Colored Wrappings

Would you like to know how to make your Christmas packages as attractive as these? There are all sorts of clever tricks that you can master with bright paper and ribbon tape if you will simply write to Dorothea Duncan at The Washington Post, inclosing name, address and a stamp requesting the two bulletins that have been prepared to teach you how to tie intriguing Christmas bundles.

Yule Cookery's Zest Increased By Fruit Peels

Orange, Lemon or Grapefruit Rinds Easily Made Into Delicacies.

CANDIED ORANGE, lemon or grapefruit peel is frequently used in Christmas cooking. These peels can be prepared at home and all require the same method.

Cut the peel into havles or quarters. Let them stand overnight in salt water (one tablespoon of salt to one quart of water). Drain and wash thoroughly. Simmer in clear water, changing the water several times until it has no bitter taste. When the peel is tender, drain, cut into strips or add whole to the following sirup and simmer until it is transparent. Drain, roll in granulated sugar, and allow the peel to dry well before packing.

For the sirup use two cups of sugar, one cup of water and one-third cup light corn sirup. Boil the sirup before adding the fruit until it will spin a thread when dropped from the tip of a spoon (234 degrees F.).

Ice Cream Sauces.

Melted vanilla ice cream is excellent in eggnog. Other flavors can be used to advantage as a sauce for plain cake.

Farmhouse Supper Is Memorable Meal

Homemade Apple Butter Is Most Intriguing of Dishes.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOU are city-bred and your only experience in the country was a visit to the farm during the summer of your sixth or seventh year, you will understand how excited I was to return after 20-odd years to the same farmhouse in western Pennsylvania and find everything unchanged. Even the dog that greeted me at the back might have passed for the dog that I used to chase around the barnyard during my first visit, for it was a collie, a white one with soft brown spots.

D. Ducan.

I walked in uninvited—everyone in the country seems to call in this fashion—about 4:30 in the afternoon. I had forgotten that was the usual supper hour in the country, dinner, of course, being always served in the middle of the day.

Fashions in country dining rooms, at least in this part of the farming territory in Pennsylvania, haven't changed. The kitchen is still the center of most of the social activity in the farm house and is used for a dining room and living room as well as for cooking.

I wasn't even polite enough to be embarrassed for calling at supper hour, for I was immediately invited to draw up a chair and have supper with the family. I would have been bitterly disappointed, too, if I had not received this invitation, and had been closeted in the little parlor with the rose decorated rug and the bright gas logs, for the sight of long loaves of fresh homemade bread peeping from under clean white cloths on a table had set my mouth watering.

Supper in the country, for those who have never enjoyed such a pleasure, is not a light snack made up of sandwiches and cold cuts, but it is a real meal that would pass for an excellent dinner in the city.

There was homemade sausage, real country style, flavored delicately with sage and fried in little round cakes. They were done to a turn, pleasingly soft and juicy on the inside and beautifully brown on the outside. There was a huge bowl of fried potatoes. The kind that have been cooked first and then sliced and fried to a golden brown in a skillet. The corn served in cream sauce was just as good and just as sweet as though it had been picked that evening. Of course, it was canned right there at the farm and had been raised in the fields just beyond the spring house.

There were plenty of milk and golden butter that had been churned right outside the kitchen door in the spring house. There were yeast rolls as round as the palm of your hand and as high and light as the feather beds in the bedrooms above.

Country Sausage and Corn in Cream Sauce Are Delicious.

The coffe was mighty black and thick, but I didn't mind because I could gracefully turn it aside for a cup of steaming hot fragrant sassafras tea. The mistress of the farm has promised to send me some of the sassafras roots and I am going to serve sassafras tea the next time I have a guest that complains of weariness or fatigue. It does wonders at banishing that let down feeling.

There were any number of other delightful things and they had all been prepared right there in the farm kitchen; sweet pickles with just a dash of mustard, elderberry jelly and two varieties of cookies, the recipes for which must have been brought over from Germany. But the most intriguing of all dishes was the homemade apple butter.

It is almost impossible to duplicate such a meal, but it certainly makes me realize how good the simple dishes can be. The very next time I invite a crowd in for Sunday night supper, they are going to be served scrambled eggs with golden corn, broiled sausage cakes, homemade rolls with plenty of butter and sweet apple cider and large slices of spice cake. The apple butter is the only dish I won't even try to duplicate.

Housewife Has a Wide Choice Of Tempting Holiday Desserts

HOLIDAY DESSERTS are something to anticipate. Nothing airy and intangible about them. Instead they are chock full of luscious rich nuts and fruits, spicy and yet delicate in flavor.

Pumpkin, mince meat, dried fruits, cider, wines, toasted almonds and Brazil nuts add their goodness to these puddings, pies and holiday cookies.

The foundation of all these rich pies is perfect, flaky pastry made of pastry flour and pure fresh shortening. Follow the pastry directions in the following recipe and you will have a background worthy of your special fillings.

Steamed puddings are much in order during the holidays, too. In these the shortening is usually suet. Be sure to ask for kidney suet when you buy, for it is the firmest, whitest suet from the carcass. Chill it and chop it fine with a light sprinkling of flour to keep it from sticking together.

Steamed puddings must be boiled a long time to thoroughly melt the suet and blend the fruit flavors. One pound baking powder tins are good to use for steaming puddings, since they need only two hours cooking in this size can. If large cans are used they should be steamed for four hours. A piece of oiled paper over the top of the can under the lid prevents the pudding from becoming too moist.

These little puddings, wrapped in oiled paper and cellophane, make delightful gifts "from our house to yours."

Holiday cookies are always in order—either for home use, to stock Christmas stockings or to pack in attractive boxes for Christmas gifts. Now is the time to get in trim for making these delightful desserts.

Simple Cookies For Children At Christmas

Gingerbread or Butter Dough in Fancy Shape Preferred to Rich Flavors.

ARE you planning to make several batches of simple cookies for the children for the Christmas holidays? Many of the less rich doughs can be cut in attractive shapes representative of the Yuletide season. These will please the youngsters far more than a rich delicate morsel that depends upon its flavor rather than its intriguing appearance for its charm.

Any of the plain butter cookie or ginger-bread doughs can be rolled out and cut in fancy shapes. These may be baked with a light sprinkling of colored or white sugar or a mixture of cinnamon and sugar. Raisins or currants are some of the simpler and more easily digested fruits that can be used to decorate cookies for the very young. Ginger cookies baked and then frosted with a thin coating of cooked sugar and milk icing and topped with a sprinkling of red, blue or yellow sugar are always a favorite of the children.

Christmas Recipes.

The following recipes were submitted last week in The Post's contest for Christmas cookie recipes. They were not prize winners, but are worthy of honorable mention, for they are especially well suited for the younger members of the family.

Ginger Ice Box Cookies.

1 cup sugar
1 cup shortening
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup molasses
4½ cups flour
3 teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt

Cream shortening and sugar. Add beaten eggs and molasses. Add dry ingredients, which have been sifted together. Form into two loaves. Chill until firm. Slice thin. Bake in a moderate oven on a cookie sheet for 8 to 10 minutes.

Maple Sugar Cookies.

1 pound of maple sugar
1 pound of flour
½ pound of butter or other shortening
2 eggs beaten together
1 teaspoon of soda
1 teaspoon of cinnamon

Cream shortening, add maple sugar, and cream well. Sift flour, soda and cinnamon together and add to creamed mixture. Add beaten eggs to the creamed mixture and mix well. Roll out very thin and cut into fancy designs. Bake in a moderate oven until a golden brown.

MRS. W. R. SPIELMAN.
136 Broadway, Hagerstown, Md.

Kriss Kringle Cookies.

1 teaspoon baking powder
1 pound flour
½ pound butter
½ pound sugar
5 egg yolks
Grated rind of 1 lemon

Whip butter and sugar to a foam, add egg yolks one at a time and whip. Add remaining dry ingredients sifted together and grated lemon rind.

Roll out, not too thin. Cut in fancy shapes. Brush tops with whipped egg yolk. Sprinkle with coarsely chopped almonds, sugar and cinnamon, mixed together. Bake in a slow oven.

MRS. J. H. BURTON.
Forestville, Md.

Cry Baby Cookies.

1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
2 eggs
1 cup molasses
1 cup milk sweet or sour
4 cups flour
1 cup raisins, chopped
2 teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon each nutmeg, cloves, allspice
¼ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Cream shortening and sugar. Add beaten eggs, then molasses, then milk. Sift all dry ingredients together and gradually add to first mixture. Add floured raisins, floured with some of sifted mixture, last. Drop from tablespoon on greased pan and bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees to 350 degrees F.) ten to twelve minutes. Makes 12 dozen cookies.

Milk, Cakes and Fruit—an Ideal "Snack"

When outdoor exercise whets the appetite, fresh fruit, a glass of milk and a rum cake make an ideal "snack." Augmented by a main dish, they are delicious for a Sunday night supper.

'3 at a Snack' Restore One After Sports

Fresh Fruits, Cakes and Glass of Milk Are Ingredients.

AFTER a brisk walk, a bicycle ride or a canter on a cold December day, a snack is a welcome offering. Three at a snack . . . fresh fruits, individual cakes, baked to a golden brown with luscious rum butter frosting, and tall glasses of fresh milk are tempting enough to induce anyone to linger awhile for a bit of refreshment.

This combination is a pleasant one. The delicious rum butter frosting makes the cup cakes unusually good with any tart fresh fruit, and the bland flavor of fresh milk.

If you wish to use this combination for more than a snack, you may provide a hot main dish, such as chicken a la king, or a noodle ring with creamed shrimp, or with creamed mushrooms and asparagus tips.

For the cakes, use the conventional method of mixing the ingredients. Cream the butter until it is a light yellow. Add a little sugar at a time, a tablespoon or more and beat until very light. Then add eggs, beat and add a little of the flour mixture. Add flour alternately with milk mixture, adding flour last and beating until it is well mixed—about 30 seconds.

When the cakes are cool, cut into the top of each, using the center of a doughnut cutter to remove a round section. Fill cavity and spread top with rum butter frosting. Replace scooped out portion, and top with a rose of frosting made with a pastry tube. You can add a bit of red maraschino cherry for a garnish, if you wish.

Now for the recipes, which are kitchen-tested.

Rum Cakes.

2½ cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup butter
1¼ cups fine granulated sugar
3 eggs, well beaten
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons rum

Sift flour, measure, resift three times with baking powder. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, then the eggs; beat until fluffy and light in color. Combine milk and rum and add alternately with the flour, beginning and ending with flour. Beat for 30 seconds after flour is all dampened. Dip batter out into buttered muffin tins and bake 10 minutes in a slow oven (300° F.); then increase heat to 375° and bake 15 minutes longer. Yield: 18 cakes.

Rum Butter Frosting.

¼ cup butter
1½ cups confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons rum

Cream butter well; gradually work in the sugar, then the rum. Yield: enough for 18 cup cakes.

The same cakes, of course, can be made without the rum and delicious and nourishing served with milk and fruits.

Try Field Cress For Varying Menu

Fennel Also Recommended, But It's Hard to Find.

FAMILY meals often are monotonous because the average housekeeper continually serves the foods with which she is familiar and which have the approval of the family. Introducing some vegetable which is not new, but has never been served at your own table is an excellent idea.

Water cress may appear frequently as a salad in your home. But have you tried field cress, sometimes called land cress? It is in season now. The leaves are less delicate than water cress; the flavor is more pungent. All it needs to be ready for serving is a thorough washing and a dash of French dressing.

Fennel is more difficult to find because there is relatively little demand for it, but it is worth asking for. While it can be cooked as a vegetable, it is excellent to give unusual flavor to a salad. It has an elusive flavor that generally meets with approval.

Keep Pantry Full For Emergencies

Your emergency pantry shelf should include a variety of foods, for you never know when you will be called upon to serve luncheon and dinner or even breakfast to some unexpected guest.

It will be well to keep on hand on the pantry shelf at least one or two cans or jars of various kinds of soup, meat, fish and vegetables; some materials for salads, such as canned fruits, marshmallows, bottled salad dressing; a few desserts such as plum or suet pudding and some of the gelatin preparations. Hors d'oeuvres and relishes, like anchovies, pickles and olives are always useful. Walnut meats, almonds or mixed nuts and raisins make an emergency dessert, and crackers and biscuits add to the soup, salad or dessert course. Condensed, evaporated or powdered milk are always useful.

Broiled Grapefruit.

Broiled grapefruit makes a delicious appetizer or dessert. Cut grapefruit in halves and remove centers and seeds. Cut the fruit from the skin with a sharp knife. Add a teaspoon of butter and one of sugar to each center. Broil in hot oven until fruit turns a light golden brown.

Wine Sauces Salty.

In the use of cooking wines allowance must be made for the salt contained. It is advisable not to season the dish with salt until after the wine has been added.

Turkey Left-Over Makes Tasty Dish

Can Be Warmed Over With Dressing and Gravy.

THE half-demolished turkey can be rewarmed in the following manner: Take the drumsticks if they are left and the wings and remove any meat remaining on the breast. Also use any pieces that have remained on the platter when the turkey was first served. Disjoint the back piece, splitting it down the back and cutting each piece in two, thus making four pieces of the back. Do not cut meat from the bones.

Place all the pieces in a kettle, add three tablespoons of the stuffing and any gravy that may have been left from the roast. Add water to half the height of the turkey in the kettle, cover kettle tightly, and set it where it will come to a boil, then reduce the heat and simmer at least 45 minutes, stirring often, adding more water if it should seem necessary. There should be just enough water at the last to keep the turkey from sticking to the kettle. The turkey should stew just long enough to warm thoroughly, but not long enough to cause the meat to fall from the bones. Season with salt and pepper.

Household Hints

The following household hints have been offered to Post food page readers by Mrs. Beatrice May, 1322 Morris road, Anacostia, D. C. Other food page readers are invited to send in any hints that they have found practical.

To remove grease spots from the floor, sprinkle them with dry soda, pour over this boiling water, let stand a short time, scrub and spots are gone.

To remove ink stains wash with sweet milk immediately and every trace is out.

If your are bothered with mice, put camphor in the place that is frequented by them. It will drive them away.

On the Air Today

FOR a time it looked as though Sigmund Romberg's new operetta would open without the distinguished composer among those present for the "first night." And after all what an absurd situation: a Romberg premiere without Romberg. The opening for the production—"May Wine"—was set for tonight at New York's St. James Theater. Apparently no one gave a thought to the composer's weekly radio program falling not only on the same night of the week—but at 10 o'clock, without doubt the worst possible hour.

Romberg, however, decided he could make the theater in time for the last part of the last act if New York traffic behaved itself. Then came a reconsideration. Once again Broadway's traditions were set aside in favor of the upstart—radio—and the opening was rescheduled at a late moment for Thursday night. So "Rommie" will see his newest musical creation from beginning to end.

* * * *

It was not so long ago that Billy Rose announced his new production "Jumbo" would favor the weekly air performance—and as a result the Hippodrome is dark one week night in order to let the radio broadcast proceed from the arena without conflict with the regular routine for the theater customers.

A day or two ago Helen Hayes announced that her forthcoming stage production of "Victoria Regina" would bow to the airways each Tuesday night. Miss Hayes will continue her "New Penny" air appearances while the "Victoria Regina" cast takes a night off.

Six years ago, out in Chicago, a young rate clerk in a business office decided to take voice lessons and give the show business a trial. After a few weeks his teacher suggested he learn to play the banjo, to enhance his chances of obtaining prompt professional employment. He took up banjo. His teacher recommended him to Maestro Johnny Maitland, who hired him. That was in June, 1929. In 1930 he was signed by Gus Arnheim for his Cocoanut Grove orchestra in Los Angeles. At that time Arnheim was introducing a young vocalist named Bing Crosby. And one of his saxophone players was Jimmy Grier and one of his fiddlers was Carlos Molina.

The young banjo-playing vocalist took on a load of experience in the ensuing four years, and last night entrenched himself definitely in the minds of the radio audience—and with those who pay for N. B. C.'s "Minstrels." Along with the veteran, Gus Van, and Malcolm Claire, also new to the show—Billy White scored a hit. It took four years, but White knows now there'll be no more rate-clerk days.

Last-minute note—Joe Morrison will do a quarter-hour turn at WRC tonight at 7:30. He'll skip over to the studios between shows at the Fox. Joe is marked principally in the public mind for having done much to popularize "The Last Roundup" while singing with George Olson's band. That has been softened some since by the introduction of "Isle of Capri." However, I am one who still thinks "The Last Roundup" was, and still is, a grand song. J. H. H.

★★★★ WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1935 17

P. U. C. Seen As Favorable To Gas Cuts

Proposed Sliding Scale Would Save Users $851,598 Yearly.

Public Utilities Commission approval of the sliding scale proposed for future District gas rate adjustment was forecast at the end of the first day of public hearings on it yesterday.

The commisison may accept the $21,750,000 valuation proposed as the new rate base or it may find another valuation of its own satisfactory to the Washington Gas Light Co. and its subsidiaries.

Whatever its course, the commission is expected to preserve for possible future use the voluminous and costly valuation records built up during months of hearings which were suspended to permit opposing counsel to seek an agreement which would settle the protracted litigation and fix a basis for future rate adjustment.

It is on the basis of the $21,750,000 valuation that the companies proposed a new rate structure which would make local rates the lowest manufactured gas rates in any city of the country. The companies estimated their proposed reductions would amount to $851,598 a year. Of this total, however, more than $500,000 has been in effect for the last two years under temporary orders of the commission enforcing an 8½ per cent discount in monthly bills of consumers. The proposed new schedules would mean an additional cut of more than $300,000 beyond the 8½ per cent discount.

Cuts All Schedules.

Cuts would be made in all schedules under the proposed new rate structure, detailed explanation of which was begun by E. J. Boothby, vice president and general manager of the Washington Gas Light Co., shortly before the commission adjourned for the day at 5 p. m. The hearings will be resumed at 10 a. m. today.

On the basis of business of the companies during the 12 months ended with last June 30, allowing for proposed increased provision for retirements, the new rates would net a return of 6.4 per cent on the $21,750,000 valuation. The sliding scale agreement under consideration fixes the basic rate of return at 6.5 per cent.

Throughout its computations, the companies based their comparisons on the old rate schedules, without allowing for the long-standing "temporary" 8.5 per cent discount. Boothby testified that of the total reductions in rates and charges, 62 per cent would go to domestic consumers, 12.4 per cent to the building heating schedules, 5.2 to commercial and industrial users under one schedule and 18.4 under another and 0.4 per cent to wholesale apartment house rates.

Minimum Retained.

The minimum charge for domestic consumers was kept at 75 cents a month, for which 800 cubic feet of gas would be allowed. For the next 3,200 feet, the charge would be 80 cents per 1,000; for the next 6,000 the rate would be 66 cents per 1,000. Under existing rates, as modified by the discount order, the domestic consumer would pay 91.5 cents for the first 1,000 feet, 82.35 cents for the next 2,000, and 72.25 cents per 1,000 feet in excess of 3,000. Disregarding the discount the total reduction in this schedule was put at $528,323.

Greatest change made in the building heating schedules was removal of the so-called demand charges which ranged from $2 up, depending on the capacity of the heating plant. A straight 60 cents per 1,000 cubic feet rate was fixed for consumption. Boothby said application of block rates had not been attempted because to do so would use up a disproportionate share of the total amount available for all rate reductions. The total reduction in this schedule was put at $105,582.

The new structure combines the former two commercial industrial schedules and begins with a minimum charge of 75 cents a month, for which 900 cubic feet of gas would be allowed, and continues with 80 cents per 1,000 cubic feet for the next 9,100 feet; 66 cents for the next 90,000; 59 cents per 1,000 for the next 900,000; 45 cents per 1,000 for the next 1,000,000 feet; with 40 cents per 1,000 over 2,000,000 cubic feet.

Rates Necessary.

"We felt these rates were necessary," Boothby testified "in order to hold a great part of our present business and compete against other fuels for new business. We have lost business in some of the smaller shops under the old rates."

The apartment house schedule would begin at 80 cents per 1,000 for the first 5,000, go to 75 cents for the next 5,000, to 70 cents for the next 15,000 and to 65 cents over 25,000.

Seasonal, off peak consumption rates were reduced to 59 cents for the first 25,000 feet and to 37 cents in excess of 25,000, with limitation on maximum use within the rates.

During the year ended last June 30, the companies sold 7,577,568,000 cubic feet of gas and there were 129,661 meters in use, of which 4,816,867,000 cubic feet were used by domestic consumers among whom there were 118,253 meters.

Importance Stressed.

Importance of the rates was emphasized by William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and by William A. Roberts, People's Counsel. Roberts strongly advocated approval of the agreement. This was worked out in lengthy conferences between Stoddard M. Stevens, jr., and John Bruton, of Sullivan & Cromwell, New York law firm retained by the companies, and E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, and Hinman D. Folsom, special assistant corporation counsel, attorneys for the commission, and Roberts.

Clayton took exception to the closed conferences at which the agreement was drafted. He protested the commission should not accept it because no representatives of the Federation of Citizens had participated. He also insisted the commission should not approve any sliding scale agreement before it had on its own authority determined a valuation for the companies. That the commission does not intend to do so was indicated by Keech's questions.

Traffic Deaths In City Reach 107 for Year

Auto Collision Fatal to H. W. Andrews, Iron Products Official.

Washington's traffic fatalities this year soared to 107 yesterday with the death of Henry W. Andrews, 67, 3603 New Hampshire avenue northwest, vice president of the J. B. Kendall Iron Products Co.

Mr. Andrews was struck by an automobile operated by Louis Ruehl, 708 Irving street northeast, in the 1500 block of Eckington place northeast. Ruehl was released to appear before a coroner's jury.

nearby and was heading for the freight yards across Eckington place.

Mr. Andrews, a native of Washington, had been employed at the Kendall company for 40 years. He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Rose N. Andrews; a son, John, and a daughter, Frances.

Raymond E. Mannix, 26, 210 Tenth street southeast, was seriously injured early yesterday when an automobile he was riding in was in collision in the 300 block S street northeast with a car operated by Joseph E. Butler, 43, 1420 Girard street northeast.

Mannix, who was a passenger with his brother, Enloe F. Mannix, 25, suffered a possible fractured skull and internal injuries. His condition was said to be serious at Sibley Hospital, where Enloe Mannix was also treated for cuts and bruises.

Women Drivers Held.

Two women motorists were ordered held for the action of Police Court under the negligent homicide act yesterday after an inquest into the traffic death of Lola Wilkinson, 26, of Bethesda, Md., fatally injured October 24.

Miss Wilkinson was riding in an automobile operated by Elizabeth Reese, 21, also of Bethesda, when it collided at Thirty-fourth and Garfield streets northwest, with a car driven by Mrs. Consuelo Smith, 3701 Thirty-third street northwest.

Taken to Emergency Hospital, Miss Wilkinson was pronounced dead from a fractured skull shortly after her arrival. The coroner's jury held both women were driving their cars in a careless manner. They were released in custody of their attorneys to appear in court.

A second inquest into the death of Albert Walmsley, 68, 1133 Vermont avenue northwest, killed Friday, was postponed until Thursday. Walmsley was struck while crossing Fifteenth street in the 1000 block northwest by a car driven by Harry A. Magnuson, 40, 1480 Chapin street northwest. Walmsley was pronounced dead upon his arrival at Emergency Hospital.

Traffic Head Wants More Control Steps

Van Duzer Would Stop All-Day and All-Night Parking.

Increased Staggering of Government Hours Also Advocated.

By a host of expedients, Washington is battling its problems of traffic congestion, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said yesterday. But, in his mind, the ideal effort would be elimination of all-day and all-night parking.

He told the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, that 47,000 automobiles are parked all night on Washington's streets, and the members cheered when he said the streets should be cleared.

He advocated a joint resolution of Congress to prohibit such parking, setting a date three or five years away so that the ban might be eased into effectiveness.

The Commissioners, he said, might attempt to attain this end through regulations, but a new board might sweep away the regulations.

No move to introduce such a Congressional resolution has been made, he told a reporter later.

More "Staggering" Needed.

Chief among the expedients Van Duzer mentioned were the staggering of Government hours and the installation of more traffic lights. He said 30,000 Government workers now went to work at an hour other than 9:30 a. m., and this staggering "is not as much as I'd wish." If personnel expanded any more, further staggering would be inevitable, he said.

On the traffic light situation, he said lights were necessary at intersections where 1,000 vehicles and 250 pedestrians passed per hour for eight hours in a day. Of the 4,600 street intersections in town, 303 are controlled by lights.

Van Duzer said 190 more intersections now need lights, and added:

"Congress has been giving us enough money to install about 25 each year. With the increase in traffic and congestion, it looks to me as though we'll never catch up."

It costs $900 to equip an intersection with traffic lights, Van Duzer estimated afterward.

Steps Seen as Necessary.

Altogether he laid down eight things he'd like to see:

1. More traffic lights.
2. More police.
3. More one-way streets.
4. Elimination of parking.
5. Additional staggering of hours.
6. Passage of the bill for mechanical inspection of automobiles by District employes, to take unsafe cars off the streets.
7. Taking away of the permits of both drivers involved in a collision, at least for several days as a warning, by holding both drivers on some charge.
8. Use of traffic observers who would note law violations and, when a driver had about five violations noted against him, sending of a letter advising him that those violations would be recalled in court when he was involved in an accident.

Northeast Conference

A merger of the District's law enforcement agencies that would include abolition of the Park Police was proposed as an economy measure by the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations meeting last night in the Twelfth Precinct station house.

The proposal was made by the conference president, A. F. E. Scheer, who declared duplication in police departments was one of the factors responsible for the apparent need of increases in District taxes.

The conference voted to pass the suggestion on for consideration by its ten component citizens' associations in northeast Washington.

The conference also voted to advise its civilian associations to urge location of the proposed Thomas Jefferson memorial and the Mellon art gallery in the northeast section of the city.

If necessary, a resolution adopted by the conference said, appropriations for the Fine Arts and the Park and Planning commissions should be discontinued unless Northeast is considered favorably for the gallery and the memorial.

Conference members attending the meeting took the view that downtown Washington was being so overloaded with Federal buildings that the general effect was inartistic. Diversification of buildings and avoidance of congestion resulting from centralization were aims of the action.

Manor Park Citizens

Investigation of the Washington Gas Light Co. proposal for a new rate structure for the District was proposed last night in a resolution adopted by hte Manor Park Citizens Association, meeting in the Whittier School.

The resolution would have the Public Utilities Commission examine the rate basis proposed by the company to insure against inclusion of values for properties used in distributing gas to subsidiaries serving suburban Washington areas.

The association also directed the chairman of its public utilities committee, George A. Corbin, to carry its views of the inadequacy of the Fifth street bus service before the Public Utilities Commission at the hearing schedule for December 12.

A program of entertainment was arranged for the meeting by Miss Elsie Green, principal of Whittier School. Ruth Hobbs directed a stringed ensemble, Lee Krider sang and Mrs. Edward W. Stitt presented a group of recitations. Miss Green presented association officers with Christmas gifts.

Forest Hills Citizens

The Connecticut avenue bus line lacks enough buses to handle its traffic Saturday afternoons and during rush hours, the Forest Hills Citizens Association complained in a resolution adopted last night for transmittal to Peoples' Counsel William A. Roberts.

The association, meeting in the Ben Murch High School, charged that bus service on Connecticut avenue had deteriorated since its inception.

Takoma Citizens

Additional revenue of the Capital Transit Co. since the traction merger has not been sufficient to offset added expenses, John H. Hanna, president of the company told members of the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., last night.

Although business has improved and the number of passengers increased 60 per cent since the merger, Hanna said, expenses, including the adding of new equipment and re-routing, have been high.

Hanna told the association that the best way that the company could cut operating expense was by the use of one-man cars.

Another question touched on by Hanna was the irregular spacing of cars during rush hours. He said that two things are responsible: Unequally skilled operators and varying traffic conditions.

In response to a request for more buses for use on the Takoma express line, Hanna said this would be impossible until after Christmas, as other lines in the city were more in need.

Other business included a resolution adopted asking the association's officers to oppose construction of an apartment in the 900 block of Aspen street on the ground it was in violation of the zoning regulations.

Rate Talk Planned

A representative of the Washington suburban sanitary commission will explain why Westmoreland Hills' water rates are higher than those in the District at the January meeting of the Westmoreland Hills Citizens Association, it was announced last night at the association's meeting in the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. auditorium.

Michigan Park Citizens

Admitting need for a new school to serve Michigan Park, Henry I. Quinn, member of the Board of Education, last night told the Michigan Park Citizens Association, meeting in the Bunker Hill School, that only an increase in District appropriations by Congress or a raise in the tax rate could make funds available for the school.

Plans for the projected Turkey Thicket Recreation Center and for the Bunker Hill park development were explained to the citizens by M. Kelly, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The commission hopes to have the fill completed in about six weeks and some of the sports facilities operating by spring, but the Turkey Thicket project will require at least a year for completion, he said.

Lost Boy Goes Back Home

Four-year-old Douglas Daniels stood shivering in the wind that snapped icily up Tenth street northwest yesterday morning.

He was lost and confused. But the wind didn't frighten him at all—for it was the same sort of wind that swept sailing ships at sea.

"Father works on a boat," he told a kindly policeman who found him.

The policeman brought Douglas something warm to drink, and then bundled him off to the Receiving Home, where there were other children to play with, and the wind was just a humming noise outside.

Here Douglas told Superintendent Grady H. Leonard the same story he told the policeman.

The child's bright eyes and ruddy cheeks and cheery manner won Leonard, his associates and the other children at the home.

But when Douglas' father returned from the day's work and found his son gone he immediately sought the aid of police.

Douglas' father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Daniels, of 1323 Tenth street northwest, were happy again last night. Mrs. Daniel said she had let him out to visit a friend who lives a few doors up the street. She became alarmed when she found he had not been there.

Douglas' father is an auto mechanic.

The Lynch girl was killed by a bullet wound in the left side of her head. A revolver was at her side. Kappel admitted ownership to the gun and said he found the girl when he returned from a downtown "club" about 5:30 a. m.

Paralysis Is Fatal To Willie Cross, 16

Willie Cross, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard C. Cross, of Centerville, Va., died yesterday of infantile paralysis. He had been ill a week.

Two weeks ago the youth and other members of the Future Farmers of America from Fairfax County made a trip to Kansas. He was taken ill on his return with what was at first thought to be appendicitis. The later diagnosis was infantile paralysis.

Debt Mounts At Children's Hospital Here

New Endowment Called the Only Hope for Institution.

Children's Hospital is piling up an indebtedness that during 1935 has reached a peak of $216,500, Thomas E. Sweeney, chairman of its ways and means committee, yesterday told the board of directors.

The only way in which the hospital can hope to balance its budget is through a $225,000 endowment, Sweeney declared. The board held a meeting yesterday in the hospital.

The District's leading institution for the care of sick children of needy families has a deficit of $60,000 in operating expenses, of which $10,000 was incurred in the last six months, Sweeney reported. In addition, there remains an unpaid balance of $156,500 on the $200,000 borrowed ten years ago for construction of the new V street wing.

Hope for Philanthropist.

"Our only hope is that some philanthropist will come along and endow the hospital for $250,000," Sweeney told The Post last night. "If some one will do that we will name the new wing as a memorial to him. There could be no finer memorial than that."

Inability of the Board of Public Welfare to allow the hospital as much per day for its patients as their care costs, insufficient allotments from the Community Chest, reduced returns from investments left in trust for the hospital and lessened ability on the part of parents to pay, were advanced by Sweeney as causes of the mounting operations deficit.

About 85 per cent of the hospital's patients are charity cases, Sweeney estimated. Fifty per cent of these are board of welfare patients. Sweeney put the per day cost for each child at $4.06. The welfare board pays only $2.48 a day for its patients, he said.

Allotments from the Community Chest have dropped from $64,000 in 1929, to $44,000 for this year. Earnings on trust funds have decreased through depression years from an approximate $60,000 annually to about $45,000. In addition, it was learned, the hospital is faced with a monthly interest bill of nearly $1,000.

Sweeney reported that 6,327 children, entailing 52,546 hospital days, had been treated at Children's Hospital during the last year; that there had been 14,000 visits to the Child Welfare Department; that there had been 55,681 cases cared for in the dispensary and that the case history of 70,000 Washington children are in the record room files.

The board elected as new members David Lawrence, Col. Henry L. Roosevelt, Dr. John W. Burke, Charles Moore, Roland Whitehurst, Coleman Jennings, Mrs. Charles Corby and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson.

7 Resign Posts On G. W. Paper After Disputes

Action Climaxes Period of 'Unrest' Over Handling of Hatchets' Staff.

A long period of "unrest" in the editorial room of The Hatchet, student weekly of George Washington University, has culminated in the resignation of seven members of the staff, it became known yesterday.

Richard P. Creyke, associate editor, and Ruth Brewer, society editor, handed in their resignations Wednesday. That was immediately after an edition came off the press without a story Miss Brewer had written about the addition of six members to the student council.

"But that story," Creyke said last night, "was only a minor incident. It just touched off a situation that was becoming more tense every day. There was general dissatisfaction over the handling of the personnel on the paper."

Sunday night, the deadline for The Hatchet, five others followed Creyke and Miss Brewer with resignations. These were Howard Ennes, a reporter; Charles Hallam, supervising editor of the woman's page; Ethel Nelson, a reporter; David Apter, a copy reader, and Sam Katz, women's sports editor.

"It was not our idea to put the paper on a spot," Creyke said. "Even though Miss Brewer and I resigned Wednesday, we worked Sunday night to get The Hatchet ready for the press Monday. It was not a strike."

Eleanor A. Heller is editor of The Hatchet and James Haley is an associate editor. These two, with Creyke, constituted the board of editors.

Capital Made A Spearhead In Dry Drive

Ban On All Advertising and Promotion Is Among Aims.

The second of a series of meetings intended to serve as an "inspiration" to the rest of the country to induce Congress to support the new Guyer bill to dry up the District of Columbia took place in Washington last night.

It was addressed and so styled by a supporter of oldtime prohibition, Deets Pickett, secretary of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Morals, and it took place in the hall of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Pickett had just come back from a speaking tour through Kansas, Missouri, Indiana and Oklahoma, where, he said, he addressed meetings ranging in size from 100 persons to 2,000.

Has 2-Point Program.

When he opened last night's meeting, at 8:10 p. m., ten women and six men, including a reporter, were his audience. A few other straggled in later.

Two points spearhead the present dry drive, Pickett said. They are:

"Prohibtion for the Federal territories, especially the National Capital.

"Stopping of all promotional features of the liquor traffic—advertising, display, radio promotion."

The Nation, he reported, is turning against repeal, however slowly. He estimated that the drys had gained 40 to 50 per cent in voting strength, over 1933, because, he said:

"Liquor has not lived up to its contract. When the people voted for repeal, they took the promises of the wet leaders at their face value. One-third of them didn't go to the polls at all; millions of those who did go and voted for repeal were voting for temperance."

Hammond Also Active.

At the Shiloh Baptist Church another meeting was addressed by John B. Hammond, chairman of the united dry forces of the District of Columbia. In a previously prepared statement, Hammond cited figures indicating that drunkenness in the District had increased from 16,447 arrests in the fiscal year, 1933, last of prohibition, to 22,589 in 1935. He advocated the Guyer bill.

Dry Figures Challenged.

Replying to charges made Sunday by T. B. Jarvis, local dry leader, that "1,700 saloons are flourishing in the District," the Associated Beverage Dealers of Washington, through A. D. O'Connor, secretary, yesterday denounced the accusation as "strictly false."

O'Connor cited figures showing that class C (on sale) liquor licenses are held by only 282 dealers. He classed the license holders as follows: Hotels, 21; clubs, 17; restaurants, 244.

Selection of "Ten Best Pictures of 1935" Will Prove Tough Task for Critics

Choice of Ten Must Be Made From 456 Total

Year's Standard Is Higher; Mr. Essex 'Doubles Up;' Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

As was intimated in this column yesterday, just a few lines before the predatory slug-clipper, a destructive composing-room gadget, snipped the sense completely out of the last two paragraphs, Mr. Jack Alicoate—formerly of this eminent family journal and now the enterprising editor of the Film Daily, "the daily newspaper of the motion picture"—has launched his fourteenth annual poll of the critics to determine "The Ten Best Pictures of 1935."

Last year a new record was established in the number of celluloid commentators who participated in Mr. Alicoate's fascinating guessing game.

Something like 424 of the boys and girls scattered about the country's drama desks took a whirl at the long list of eligibles submitted for their consensus of opinion.

The choices reflected a surprising unanimity of viewpoint and judgment. In one or two instances, writers on the topic of the screen managed to name the complete list of ten finally chosen as the best of the year; a few more had nine selections to their credit on the final list, and a much larger number of us had eight.

This Year Is Harder.

This year the task is more difficult than last in direct proportion to the increased number of worthy pictures, reflective of a generally raised standard of production values all along the line.

At best, it is a distinct hazard to enter this business of appraisal of the year's releases, because, as we have remarked here numerously before, no single critic by any chance can view more than a comparatively small percentage of the pictures shown during the year. This release year, incidentally, extends from November 1, 1934, to October 31, 1935.

During that period, according to Mr. Alicoate's list of films eligible to compete, and my own hurried count thereof, 456 films were flashed upon the screens of the country.

Prompted by a purely personal curiosity, I began a count of the total number I had seen, but was interrupted before I got half way through the useless process.

How Many One Views.

Up to the point where my count stopped, I had viewed 78 out of 206 of the catalogued items. I suspect that the ratio would continue with approximate fixity through the remaining 250 subjects. At any rate, I have no present intention of trying to find out.

A cursory survey of the submitted list and a hurried and purely tentative estimate of its probable worth leads me to believe that my own final selection of the "ten best" will be made from a total list of less than 50 pictures out of the 456.

By a process of gradual elimination the 40-odd will be reduced three-fourths—and there you will be!

Prior to the consummation of this magnificent annual gesture, this column's selections will be published in this space. This will be done as part of a defense mechanism set up each year against charges of "doctoring" our list after the final national selections are released by Mr. Alicoate.

In case I had one right, I wouldn't want anyone to give me credit for two.

So who should pop into the tesselated luxury of the drama department, practically straight from the Union Deppo, but that urbane international publicist, Harry Essex, whose sparkling Burgundian talents are devoted to missionary work on behalf of the theatrical enterprises fostered by that brilliant son of a distinguished father. Mr. Gilbert Miller, last survivor of a once flourishing race of international producers who kept the theater going both in New York and London simultaneously. Mr. Miller still does.

But about Mr. Essex. Harry, at the moment, has nothing to do but devise ways and means of luring cash customers into the Philadelphia opening of Mr. Miller's "Libel," and performing a similar function for the impending appearances of Helen Hayes in both Baltimore and this city in "Victoria Regina." Baltimore, by the way, will see the new Hayes vehicle for three days prior to its advent upon the stage of our National Theater, the week beginning Monday, December 16.

What with this being her home town and all, it would have been nice if Miss Hayes had brought her new play here for its premiere performance. Mr. Essex partially agreed. Then he dashed out to catch a train, or a plane, or a street car or a taxi or something to make his next "stand." Because of his idleness, they have also made him company manager of "Victoria Regina," "back with the show," as the saying is.

Will Polish Up Memories.

When "Melody Lingers On" opens on the screen at RKO-Keith's, following the current engagement of Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster in "Annie Oakley"—which will be one day this week, although no one, including Manager Hardie Meakin, seems to know which—veterans of a decade or so in the Washington theater will revive an enduring interest in the professional career of an actress once resident here. That, of course, is Josephine Hutchinson, who shares stellar honors in the film with George Houston and Helen Westley, gifted character actress and one of the executive directors of the New York Theater Guild.

Miss Hutchinson formerly was the wife of Robert Bell and is remembered by many as leading woman of his Ram's Head Players, one of the first of the "little theater" groups to undertake serious production in the National Capital.

Scored as "Alice."

She later became one of the luminaries of Eva Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theater Company in New York and left a lasting impression upon the minds of local theatergoers by her splendid performance in the title role of "Alice in Wonderland," with Miss Le Gallienne, on the stage of the National Theater.

Miss Hutchinson, since, has taken her place among the able and popular stars of Hollywood.

"The Melody Lingers On" is an Edward Small production, released through United Artists.

Reverting briefly to the visit of Mr. Essex, he points out that Laurence Housman, the distinguished author of "Victoria Regine," the new Helen Hayes play, is the victim of a persistent penchant for appearing in his own works. He wrote the role of Disraeli into his present play for his own particular delectation and on the frequent occasions when he sponsors readings of the drama always reads the part of the great Prime Minister himself. The role will be played in this country by George Zucco.

Mr. Zucco will find himself, one suspects, in a remote, but none the less acute, competition with Mr. George Arliss, whose "Disraeli" is one of the native theater's vivid memories on both stage and screen.

Variety Holds Election.

J. Louis Rome, head of Associated Theaters of Baltimore, Md., was chosen chief barker of the local Variety Club, Tent No. 11 in the national organization, at the annual election of officers and members of the board of governors in the Willard Hotel yesterday. Mr. Rome succeeded Rudolph Berger, retiring chief barker, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Washington Branch Film Exchange.

Other officers elected, all of whom will assume their new duties in January, are Carter Barron, divisional manager for Loew's, Inc., first assistant chief barker; Julian Brylawski, in charge of the local real estate department for Warner Brothers, second assistant chief barker; Sam Galanty, division manager for Columbia Pictures, treasurer, and Harry Hunter, Washington Branch Film Exchange manager for Paramount, secretary.

The New Board.

Members of the board of governors elected for a two-year term are John J. Payette, Washington zone manager for Warner Brothers; Sam Galanty, Carter Barron, Julian Brylawski, Joseph P. Morgan, former general manager of the Harry M. Crandall enterprises, and Rudolph Berger.

Elected for a one-year term are W. E. S. Wilcox, owner of the Seco Theater, Silver Spring; J. Louis Rome, Harry Hunter, Harry Brown and Sam Wheeler, manager of the Washington Branch Film Exchange of Twentieth Century-Fox.

Chairmen of the various standing committees of Variety Club will be announced by President Rome within the next few weeks.

"Crime and Punishment," Columbia's picturization of the Dostoievski novel, will be privately screened for the drama desks in the Warner projection room in the Earle Theater Building this afternoon at 2. A disquieting feature of the announcement is that the projection room has been equipped with new orchestra chairs to take the place of the wicker easy chairs formerly in use. This, obviously, is an underhanded scheme to force the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks to stay awake!

Fear-and-Trembling Note.

And to think that it might work!

Star Defies Theater's Jinxes!

The theater is notorious for its addiction to superstitions. Peacocks is one of them. So a quarter century ago they decorated the proscenium of the New Amsterdam Theater in New York with the hoodoo and vainglorious bird—and the house has been one of the most successful in the world! And now here is William Gaxton, co-star with Victor Moore in "Anything Goes," which opened last night in the National Theater for its belated Washington week, with a horseshoe suspended over his dressing-room mirror in inverted position, with the luck all running out! If Mr. Gaxton has been out of luck these past few years, we'll take some of the same!

Musical comedy came back to the Capital as it hasn't been seen in years last night, when "Anything Goes" opened its week's engagement in the National Theater.

Not even when this form of musical entertainment was in its heyday—back in the days of Flo Ziegfeld, George M. Cohan, Lew Fields, Henry W. Savage, the Shuberts, Charles Frohman, Charles Dillingham, Joe Weber and their many associates in similar effort were bringing life, color, speed, melody and rhythm to the boards—was there ever more rousing comedy, tuneful music, feminine pulchritude and lively dancing packed into two acts than last evening revealed to a large audience that reveled in the rare and diverting qualities of a spontaneous and hilarious three hours in the theater.

For the benefit of those who are not frequent commuters between Washington and New York, where this peerless example of light musical fol-de-rol has just completed a run of a solid year, and therefore may not even have seen it once, let alone half a dozen times, as so many have, let it be said that "Anything Goes" is genuine, bona-fide, blown-in-the-bottle musical comedy—not operetta, not opera bouffe, not musical travesty, not revue. Musical comedy.

Has Substantial Book.

The book—contrived by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse and welded and polished into its present perfected uses by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse—relates a coherent and practically uninterrupted narrative as ridiculous as you would care to crack a few ribs over.

It concerns the shipboard adventures of a young man and woman hopelessly in love, the counterfeit threat of homicidal violence by Public Enemy No. 13 and the uproarious complications in which these two story threads entangle everyone on the liner, including crew as well as passengers.

Cole Porter's music is valuably helpful to the plot and his lyrics among the most expressive of a number of things that have come along in many seasons.

Were it not that the whole thing is done in such an irresistible spirit of joyous hilarity and innocent fun, there are lines and situations in many scenes of the two acts that might shock sensitive natures with a blatant obscenity and occasional tinge of sacrilege.

The whole merry business, however, is bound around with such a gorgeous sense of humor, such lilting beauty and such vivacious action that everything else is forgotten.

Cast Romps to Glory.

With no great singing voices discoverable in the roster of principals, the cast still is one that scarcely could be improved upon, all things considered.

At the head of the funsters, of course, are William Gaxton and Victor Moore, those sharply contrasted masters of comedy who have come down the seasons together since "Of Thee I Sing" startled the pundits of the playhouse by winning the Pulitzer Prize for drama. As Billy Crocker, irresponsible playboy broker, and the Rev. Dr. Moon—in reality the pathetically ineffectual Public Enemy No. 13, whose low rating in the eyes of the G-men is a constant source of humiliation—they are ideally assigned.

Gaxton, pounds heavier than when he was last seen here, is as light of wit and method as ever and the beneficiary of a role that affords him practically illimitable opportunities for everything he knows how to do best. The veteran Victor Moore is funnier than he has been in either of their last two joint vehicles. His révival meeting aboard ship, when he sets out to reform his pal, Crocker, who has been mistaken for "Snake-Eyes" Johnson, Public Enemy No. 1, is a gem of rough fun that ends with the most tumultuous of the score's musical numbers, "Blow, Gabriel, Blow."

Songs and Songstresses.

Chief among those adorning the convulsing predicaments in which the stars constantly are projecting themselves are Irene Delroy, Benay Venuta and Vera Dunn. Miss Venuta, a statuesque blonde with a flair for flashy comedy, as well as a voice commensurate with the demands made upon it, finds herself frequently in the most engaging spots in the entire performance. She is, for example, inseparably associated with the song hits, "I Get a Kick Out of You," with Mr. Gaxton; "You're the Top," ditto; "Anything Goes," with the ensemble, and "Blow, Gabriel, Blow."

Miss Delroy is the slightly more dignified and less funny "love interest," who shares in "All Through the Night" and "The Gypsy in Me." Mr. Moore's "Be Like the Bluebird" also is one of the melodic masterpieces of Mr. Porter's brilliant work. Miss Dunn is a lively little soubrette with as keen a sense of the amusing as of broken dance rhythms.

The masculine "threat" is Leslie Barrie, who does an uncommonly fine job as Sir Evelyn Oakleigh, the Englishman who doesn't get the girl! Comedy roles of less gentle texture are handsomely played by Paul Everton, Helen Raymond, May Abbey, Florence Earle and Robert Lynn.

Subordinates and Settings.

A perusal of the small-type paragraph above will disclose a considerable list of additional names, any one of which might be made the subject of a laudatory remark.

The settings and costumes show faint traces of the wear and tear—not much of the latter—they have seen during the year on Broadway, but the many scenes are shifted expeditiously, while splendid male, female and mixed-voice ensembles occupy the audience's attention before the curtain and keep the mind concentrated on the inescapable fact that here is one of the best things of its kind that this or any other season is apt to afford.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

D. C. Chapter American Guild of Organists presents in recital Lyman S. McCrary, assisted by the choir of National City Christian Church (W. E. Braithwaite, director), Howard Samuel, basso, and Grace Powell, violinist. Program: Three chorale-preludes: "This Day So Full of Gladness," "Deck Thyself, My Soul" and "In Dulci Jubilo" (Bach), chorus, "While by My Sheep" (Jungst), solos, "Mighty Lord" and "My Faithful Heart" from the "Christmas Oratorio" (Bach), chorus, two Carols (Salama), Pastorale (Franck), Noels (Loret), Carillon (Vierne).

In contrast to the series of recitals by visiting organists presented last season by the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists, this program had a dual character of concert and recital, and the quality of the music was so predominantly devotional as to make the occasion seem a preparation for Christmas. For this reason, perhaps, the audience received the music in silence and departed as from an hour of quiet contemplation.

The absence of applause proved to one's satisfaction that our habit of shattering moods and dissipating illusions by noisy outbursts of hand-clapping is a distinct detriment to the enjoyment of music. I can imagine no finer tribute either to the composer or to the interpreter than absolute quiet, for there is the receptive silence of complete absorption and profound fulfillment as well as the cold silence of disapproval. And no sensitive artist could fail to distinguish the one kind of quietude from the other.

Of last evening's program the most rewarding moments were those filled with the preludes of Bach. In them are preserved the old German chorales as in a glowing amber which transmutes and glorifies their themes. Other composers have woven patterns of counterpoint about chorales, but none has done it with quite the same evocative spiritual power as Bach. It is to that essence of the spirit more than to his mastery of form that he owes his greatness.

Yule Crusade Started To Boost Union Label

District labor started what I. M. Ornburn, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor's union label trades department, called a drive for a "merry union label Christmas" yesterday afternoon.

John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, announced, in a broadcast over Station WJSV, a campaign by the 160 local labor organizations, comprising 100,000 members, to publicize the union label throughout Washington. It would be, he said, a campaign of "educational nature," with speakers going before labor, civic and commercial organizations and efforts being made to persuade local merchants to stock up with union-made goods. An information bureau was set up yesterday at 720 Fifth street northwest.

Furr Batters Sid Silas to Retain His District Welter Crown

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

ONE word from Connie Mack and the American League next week will find itself engaged in the most furious player-trading session of its 34-year history. The magic word that it remains for Mack to utter is the monosyllable "yes," indicating that he has, indeed, sold First Baseman Jimmy Foxx, Third Baseman Frank Higgins, Outfielder Roger Cramer and Shortstop Eric McNair to the Red Sox. Then the league's David Harums would swing into action.

POVICH.

Because the Red Sox, bolstered with even three of Mack's Philadelphia stars, would constitute the greatest menace to competition that the league has known in recent years. Every club in the league, with even a ghost of a hope of winning the pennant, would find it imperative to go into the market for additional talent to stave off a threatened Red Sox landslide next season. No team could afford to stand pat, as so many have done in recent years. Trades deemed unthinkable in the ordinary course of baseball events are apt to find fruition before panicky magnates are through attempting to curb the Boston threat.

And despite the persistent denials of Connie Mack his wholesale shipment of talent to Tom Yawkey's Red Sox in exchange for the best part of a half-million in cash is expected to be announced when the trading sessions open at Chicago on December 9. Sources who should be reliably informed have declared it to be true, and in every case in which Mack has disposed of his stars, he has continually denied the trades until forced to disclose them.

ONCE the suspicions of the other magnates that Yawkey has landed the pick of Mack's stars is confirmed, little time will be lost in attempting to counteract the effects of the deal on the league makeup. Every club, including the pennant-winning Detroit Tigers, will be in the field for talent, ready to buy or swap in any direction that would strengthen their line-ups. From the reports emanating from the league's various cities, here, roughly, is the situation:

Washington—Bucky Harris, disgusted with the play of both Outfielders Heinie Manush and Fred Schulte, is willing to trade either or both for even a fair pitcher. Harris would listen, too, to any trade that would include a catcher, and is probably prepared to offer as an added lure the contract of Pitcher Bump Hadley, whom he regards as a distinct risk whenever he takes the mound. Harris is prepared to stake his reputation on Buddy Lewis' prospects of making good at third base and foresees added hitting strength for the outfield if Roberto Estallella can be converted into even a half-decent outfielder defensively.

New York—Gotham demands a winner, as Col. Jake Ruppert has discovered at the cost of declining gate receipts since the Yankees last won a pennant in 1932, and, with the league's second biggest bankroll at his command, is in the player market with both feet. With Manager Joe McCarthy having soured on Outfielder Ben Chapman, the Yanks are prepared to trade him to any club that offers the best outfielder in return. The aging Tony Lazzeri at second base is expected to be included with cash in any trade that would bring one of the league's star infielders to the Yanks.

Detroit—Despite his winning hit in the World Series, Goose Goslin is not held in high respect by Manager Mickey Cochrane, who, with the weak-hitting Jo-Jo White also in his outfield, is prepared to go high for outfield talent. Goslin, through long periods last year, showed signs of advancing age and a dulled batting eye. Al Simmons is the player Detroit wants and is expected to procure him in a trade for Gerald Walker and an outlay of cash.

Cleveland—Owner Alva Bradley has already declared that only four of his Indians are not on the trading block, namely, Outfielder Earl Averill, Pitcher Mel Harder, Shortstop Bill Knickerbocker and First Baseman Hal Trosky. Why he included the bungling Trosky is not clear. But the Indians are sorely in need of an outfielder and a catcher, and if Bradley is, indeed, willing to trade his other pitchers and Third Baseman Sammy Hale, then the Indians are slated to figure in much of the swapping.

Chicago—The White Sox had a taste of the fruits at the top of the league for a long spell last summer and are intent on getting back into the race. Jimmy Dykes, with a crying need for pitchers, will offer Outfielder Al Simmons to the highest bidder, who will probably be the Tigers. And if the Indians are serious about putting Third Baseman Sammy Hale on the market, the White Sox will be among the prime bidders for him.

Methodists' Record Held Greatest

Mustangs, Princeton and Minnesota on a Par; Tarheels 8th.

By Alan Gould,

Associated Press Sports Editor.

1. Southern Methodist, Princeton and Minnesota.
4. Louisiana State and Texas Christian.
6. Stanford.
7. Ohio State.
8. North Carolina.
9. California.
10. Fordham.

This covers a wide enough spread to convince the most meticulous that top-ranking football is played in every section of the country. Obviously the South, including Texas, has a sectional edge for the year when it comes to producing outstanding teams, but the "top ten" includes two each from the East, the Middle West and the Far West.

Convincing Victories.

So far as this observer is concerned, there's nothing to choose among the three unbeaten and untied teams bracketed at the head of the list. Minnesota and Princeton finished as the class of the Middle West and East. Each registered convincing victories over natural rivals in their final tests, with the Tigers rolling up 64 points against Dartmouth and Yale, and the Gophers amassing 73 points at the expense of Michigan and Wisconsin. Over a stretch of three straight years, Princeton has lost only one game, while Minnesota has experienced no defeats and been tied four times, all in 1933.

Southern Methodist, the Rose Bowl choice, undoubtedly has the year's most remarkable record. Saturday's triumph over Texas Christian not only marked the eleventh consecutive triumph for S. M. U., but was a tribute to the team's resourcefulness under the heaviest kind of pressure. A week ago it looked as if the "pony express" were slowing down, if not breaking down. Heavy casualties were experienced in the campaign that carried the team to Los Angeles and Arkansas. The outlook was dark indeed with Texas Christian at full strength and apparently its peak but Bobby Wilson and company needed no sympathy.

Invitation Unprecedented.

Strange things have happened this season but it is hardly conceivable now that Southern Methodist will fail to hurdle Texas A. & M. next Saturday to complete an unbeaten season as champions of the Southwest. Stanford's invitation to a team that has not yet finished its regular season is unprecedented but popular all over the country. With Minnesota and Princeton definitely

86 Men Cited In Race Tip Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

BALLSTON, SPA, N. Y., Dec. 2. New York State's war on fake horse race tipping rackets broke into the open today with the arrest of two men on conspiracy charges and the announcement that a Saratoga County grand jury had returned 25 sealed indictments against 86 defendants.

The two men arrested were identified by District Attorney John B. Smith as Joseph Rifici and Samuel Rosenthal, president and treasurer of the True Sport Publishing Co., publishers of the New York Daily Racing Post.

They were arraigned before Supreme Court Justice O. Byron Brewster and pleaded innocent to indictments charging them with conspiracy to commit petit larceny and conspiracy to cheat and defraud.

May Be Extended.

Sharon J. Mauhs, assistant attorney general, said the indictments "end the investigation as far as the Saratoga grand jury is concerned." He would not say where, when, or what tracks would be included in the next phase of the investigation, although he indicated the probe would be extended to other sections of the State.

"The cases will be tried as soon as possible," he added.

Justice Brewster set bail at $10,000 each after Mauhs asserted he believed the men "have it in mind to forfeit bail."

"In view of the statement of the assistant attorney general," Justice Brewster said, " I deem it necessary to fix substantial bail."

Rosenthal countered with the statement, "one or several of us are being made the goats of this investigation."

Rifici and Rosenthal were placed in custody of the sheriff.

Mauhs said there were five other sealed indictments against the two men, but that he did not wish to arraign them on the other counts as he then would be forced to reveal the names of defendants jointly indicted but not arrested yet.

Mauhs declared that "the publication of these men has carried advertisements which have been responsible for the mulcting of thou-

Tennessee to Ask Neyland to Return

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 2.—The University of Tennessee Athletic Council announced today Maj. Robert R. Neyland would be made an offer to return as head football coach in 1936.

No details of the offer were made public, but it was reported unofficially that Neyland will be offered a five-year contract at $12,000 annually.

Prof. N. W. Dougherty, chairman of the athletic council, said the offer would be telegraphed immediately to Neyland, who is stationed with the Army in the Panama Canal Zone. An answer, he said, was expected by tomorrow.

Neyland coached the Volunteers from 1926 to 1934.

Olympic Ban Urged by 14 Coaches

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—A statement opposing American participation in the Berlin Olympiad, signed by 14 college coaches, was made public tonight by Manhattan College.

John J. Magee, veteran Olympic track coach; John Ryder, track and field coach of Boston College, and Chick Meehan, football coach of Manhattan, are among the signatories to the statement, which was addressed to the Amateur Athletic Union and the American Olympic committee.

Magee is a track coach at Bowdoin College and has served as Olympic track and field coach in 1924, 1928 and 1932.

Coaches Speak Mind.

"As athletic coaches of American colleges, we are devoting our lives to sport, and we believe that we know what sportsmanship and fair play can mean," the statement said. "As applied to the selection of the team which is to represent Germany in the eleventh Olympiad, sportsmanship and fair play demand that all Germans should be given equal opportunity to train and compete for the German team, regardless of their race, religion or political convictions, and that the only test of their eligibility should be their skill. We are convinced that not only Jews and Christians of Jewish ancestry, but also Protestants and Catholics who have no Jewish blood but who refuse to yield to Nazi domination in the realm of conscience, have been denied that equality of opportunity which is the essence of true sportsmanship."

Other Coaches Who Signed.

Others who signed the statement were Charles H. Agnew, athletic director, State Teachers College, Whitewater, Wis.; William H. Caswell, fencing coach, College of the City of New York; Alfred Chakin, wrestling coach, College of the City of New York; John K. Cox, football coach, Alfred University; Carl H. Doehling, athletic director, Ripon College; A. Eugene Haylett, director of athletics, Doane College; William S. Jackson, boxing coach, West Virginia State College; J. A. McLane, athletic director, Alfred University; James C. McLeod, cross-country coach, Alfred University; Ovid Miller McMillion, Concord State Teachers College; Nathan Putchat, athletic director, University of North Dakota; Dr. Joseph Seidlin, football and track coach, Hampton Institute; Jack Wahl, coach, Hill Military Academy, Portland, Oreg.

Senator Wagner Asks Olympic Ban

Senator Wagner, of New York, a native of Germany, opposed American participation in the Olympic games there next year in a telegram tonight to the committee on fair play sports with headquarters in New York.

Victim of New Arena's First Knockout

Joe Louis Predicts He'll Knock Out Paulino; Vows His Son Will Be a Fighter—or Else!

By the United Press.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Dec. 2.—Joe Louis made two mansized predictions today: (1) He will jab Paulino Uzcudun "right out of his shell" when they tangle on December 13, and (2) if Joe and Bride Marva have a son, "he'll be a fighter—or else!"

The brown bomber was in his favorite position during the chat. He was stretched out, face downward, on a rubbing table—"restin' easy" while Trainer Jack Blackburn, a semi-bald darky with razor tattooing on his face, dried him down with a big white towel.

Shufflin' Joe had just finished his first hard workout in preparation for next week's battle with Paulino, the basque biffer. He perspired freely after five fast rounds with four rugged sparmates—all "shell" sluggers of the Uzcudun type.

The little dressing room, just off Dr. Bier's indoor gymnasium, was jammed with members of the Louis entourage, reporters and hangers-on. The room was warm and the air was heavy with cigarette smoke and the pungent odor of rubbing oil. But Joe was "restin' easy" and chatting.

"Ah got mah fingers crossed to say that Paulino ain't no tougher'n Maxie Baer," said Joe. "Ah'll say—Maxie was the toughest guy to knock out ah ever fought. Ah thought that man never w-a-s goin' down. Ah's shoah ah won't have to drill on Paulino so hard and so long. Figure he'll go down before the third round.

Has Never Seen Rival.

"Understand he fights out of a shell," continued Joe. "Bobs and weaves with his head down behind his elbows. Ah'll just open him up like a clam. Jab his head right out from behind those elbows—and then put him away. Won't take long."

No, Joe wasn't afraid of hurting his hands on the Basque's elbows or head. Never had any hand trouble yet. "Y'see, ah got good hands for a fighter. Knuckles line up straight. All knuckles take the shock evenly. Maybe that's the reason ah don' hurt 'em."

Confidence, Poise.

Victories over Primo Carnera, King Levinsky and Maxie Baer and the resultant glorification have wrought great changes in the erstwhile fead-panned, silent Joe. This new Joe Louis has confidence, poise, a ready smile, a plentitude of conversation and a flock of ready wisecracks.

"Understand you and Marva expect an addition to the family," said a prying reporter.

"What' that!" ejaculated Joe, half rising from the table "Say, boy, Marva 'n' me just been married recently. Don't be tryin' to hurry us that way. Give us time, boy; give us time. No, suh! We ain't expectin' nothin.' Least, Ah hopes we ain't."

But if Joe and Marva should become a trio, and the newcomer happened to be a boy—would Joe want him to be a fighter.

Great Fighter.

"He'll be a fighter—or else," chuckled Joe. "Yes suh, boy, he'll be a great fighter."

"Sowbelly!" snorted Trainer Blackburn. "He won't be any fighter. He'll probably be a runner. Probably be tellin' the kids to let him alone or he'll get his pappy to whup 'em."

But Joe insisted his son would be a fighter. He thought fighting was a swell business, particularly because a feller could get plenty of sleep in that occupation.

"Course, a good fighter makes a pretty good livin,' too," he concluded, "but Ah figure everybody ought to get about 16 hours sleep every day. Leastways, Ah needs it. Guess my son wouldn't be no 'ception. And it's pretty hard to get that much sleep if you're a workin' man."

Griffith Eyes Pro Eleven In Capital

ENVISAGING a Washington franchise in the National Professional Football League next fall, Clark Griffith will confer next week with Joe Carr, president of the circuit.

Both Griffith and Carr, who is president of the Columbus team of the American Association, will be in attendance at the annual major leagues baseball meeting at Chicago on December 8 and 9 and it will be then that the Washington club owner will discuss the possibilities of a professional football franchise here.

The National Professional League, as presently constituted, is unevenly balanced with five teams in the West and four in the East. Griffith believes the league would welcome the addition of Washington to give both East and West equal representation.

At first cold to the idea, Griffith during the last two years has become an enthusiastic football fan and believes Washington ripe for a professional team. The manner in which Washington fans have supported the George Washington University eleven has left a profound impression with the Washington Baseball Club owner, who declares that, given the proper attractions, Washington is a good football town.

Referee Saves Mickey Walker

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Gallant old Mickey Walker, former welter and middleweight champion of the world, met another stumbling block along the comeback trail tonight when Eric Seelig, of Germany, cut him so badly their scheduled ten-round bout was stopped in the seventh.

The Rumson, N. J., bulldog, weighing 174¾, was outclassed throughout by the German who scaled 163¼. Mickey's best effort came in the fifth when the battling was even.

Walker's eye was cut at the end of the sixth round and the wound was widened in the seventh. Mickey was still stumbling in, bleeding profusely, when Referee Johnny McAvoy stopped the proceedings.

Bicycle Races Marked By a Bit of Diplomacy

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—John M. Chapman, manager of the six-day bike race which began at Madison Square Garden last night, didn't wish to offend two German riders by failing to put their national colors at their trackside relief bunk. Neither did he wish to invite disorder by flying the Nazi swastika there.

By Bill McCormick.

PHIL FURR, still the District welterweight champion, if that's your idea of fun, settled once and for all the question of supremacy between himself and Sid Silas in a bout which fittingly opened the new Joe Turner Arena last night.

Furr, defending his title in a bout scheduled for 15 rounds, scored a technical knockout over Sidneh in the thirteenth round, but the cold record of the result gives no indication of the thrills that were packed in the not-too-important contest which drew 1,500 to the ringside.

The match had everything that any fight fan might reasonably expect. It started with some pretty classy boxing by both sides to the argument, reached a new high for action later in the course of events and finally achieved a thrilling climax in the spectacular knockout finish.

Silas Takes Lead.

Silas established a clear lead, while the boxers' efforts were dedicated to boxing. He rolled and blocked most of Furr's wild leads and at the same time bedeviled Philip no end with a trained left jab and smashing right cross to the head.

Along about the sixth round Furr began to fight as he can fight. He discarded the smattering of ring science he has and waded in with both hands flying to the head and body. By the tenth round it was anybody's fight and it was only a question of who would tire first.

Silas began to feel the rigors of the long campaign in the eleventh round. He was aided and abetted in reaching this feeling by a smashing left hook to the body which Phil delivered in close. So effective was that punch that poor Sid returned to his corner nauseated.

In the twelfth round, Silas became an easy target for Furr's looping right to the head, which he had been dodging in the early rounds by the simple expedient of inserting a straight left in Phillip's face from then on Sidney was fighting a lost cause.

Silas Dances Out.

Then came the finish. Silas whanged a whoopla right hand in the general direction of Furr's head. It missed, and as it missed, Furr shot home a short left hook to the chin.

That left hook was the straw that broke the camel's back. Added to the numerous staggering rights to the chin, it was sufficient to apply the coup de grace, sending Silas flat on his back.

As Referee Denny Hughes began to chant, Silas' body gave a convulsive twitch in an effort to rise to the battle. At the count of eight he still was twitching, but still recumbent.

Silas' chief second was Ray Bowen, one of the better fighters produced in Washington. In the closing days of his ring career, Ray was often in the same position that Silas was occupying as the referee counted. Bowen, himself a stout-hearted fighter who rose from the rosin dust too often, knew what was in store for Silas if he

Bell, S. M. U. Coach, a Failure 2 Years Ago; Lucky, He Says

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Dec. 2.—Two years ago today he sat uneasily in the favorite rendezvous of downtrodden football coaches—the "doghouse."

Today his hand was swollen from handshaking; his telephone bell had clanged for hours and congratulatory telegrams littered his desk.

He was "fired" as head coach at Texas A. & M. College at the fag end of the 1933 schedule—unable to "produce" in his five-year stretch there.

He got his fingertips on his falling star by signing as line coach at Southern Methodist under Head Coach Ray Morrison in 1934. Then Morrison left his famed "aerial circus," went back to his alma mater, Vanderbilt, and Southern Methodist gambled on the man they picked up as a "free agent."

Just luck, says Matty. Saturday night at Fort Worth, a couple of hours after his Mustangs had pranced to a 20-to-14 victory over a great Texas Christian University team, Bell smiled and remarked:

"We were awful lucky out there today. Either team could have won."

Undefeated Tigers Enjoy Monopoly on East All-Star Eleven; Three Chosen on First Team

Army, Navy, Yale Place Men on First and Second Teams.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Princeton, as the East's only unbeaten and untied contender for championship football honors this year, monopolizes tthe Associated Press All-Easttern selections, compiled today.

One Tiger senior, John Weller at guard, and two juniors, Ken Sandbach at quarterback, and Steve Cullinan at center, win places on the first team. Three other sons of Old Nassau's great team, Gil Lea at end, Charlie Toll, sophomore tackle, and Jack White, sophomore halfback, gain positions on the alternate All-Star team.

Army, Navy and Yale are the only other institutions to place more than one player on either team. Capt. Bill Schuler at end and Charles (Monk) Meyer, triple-threat halfback, both land positions on the first team as the climax of brilliant performances. Yale's Robert Train, at end, and Capt. Kim Whitehead, at fullback, capture assignments on the second team. For the Navy, Jack Schmidt is a first-team choice and Lou Robertshaw, captain and center, is an alternate selection.

Colgate, Syracuse, Holy Cross, Rutgers and Villanova each has one representative on the first team.

To make room on the first team for the East's outstanding linemen, Capt. Ed Michaels of Villanova is shifted from guard to tackle. Extremely versatile, with a knack for thrusting through opposing lines as well as sensational tackling ability, Michaels is at home in either position. This makes it possible to include Phil Flanagan, star running guard for Holy Cross, in the starting line-up.

Jinnee, Favorite, Wins Inaugural Feature at Charles Town

3,000 Watch 3-Length Triumph

Donna Dulcin Second; Daily Double Returns $65.20 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 2. With mountains to the right of them and mountains to the left of them, the horses returned to action here in the lower Shenandoah River Valley this afternoon. A crowd of some 3,000, many of whom were at Bowie Saturday, greeted racing as conducted by the Charles Town Jockey Club over the ground that was a "sporting field" in the colonial days.

It was only fitting that the red and gray colors of the Bond family, of Baltimore, should be flown to victory in the day's feature race. The Bond horses have done much to build the popularity of this sporty track, and Jinnee, a son of Genie, seemed to catch the spirit of the thing, for he made no mistakes under the handling of Jockey Sammy Palumbo.

In the role of a $4.20 favorite, Jinnee scampered over the line three lengths in advance of Donna Dulcin, which had a length the best of Corner Boy after the run over the 7-furlong route.

Jinnee Much Improved.

Jinnee, which has improved many hundreds of dollars in value since last summer, went to the front when Palumbo gave the word and held sway with the greatest of ease, while the others in the field of seven were only chasing.

The daily double, operated on the second and third races, brought a pay-off of $65.20 to those who bet the combination of Sundrops and Feuette. The daily double pool was $2,246 and mutuel play for the day seemed headed for a $40,000 total, enough to keep the track out of the "red."

Aga Ray, 4-year-old gelding, romped to victory in the first race over the 5-furlong sprint course. Jockey J. Brooks did the riding and made no mistakes. Brooks took the lead at the far turn and then rated his mount along. Hogarty, a long shot, was second, and Ree was third in the field of eight. Aga Ray paid $6.

In the role of favorite, Sun Drops won the second race over the 7-furlong course. The filly was J. Brooks' second straight winner. Mint Bud, the early pacemaker, was second and Flower Time took the minor money. Sun Drops was kept within striking distance of Mint Bud, took command at the far turn and had to be kept under pressure thereafter. The daughter of Sun Edwin paid $4.60.

Feuette Wins Third.

Excellently ridden by Jockey J. Cowley, Feuette won the third race at an $18.80 mutuel. Slow to get into best stride, Feuette withstood a long drive to reach Loch London in the stretch and win going away. Dark Loveliness took third money.

Viva Pete proved much the best in the fourth race. He was given substantial backing in the mutuel machines and after he had outclassed his opposition a $3 mutuel was displayed. Ridden by Jockey Willie Obert, who says he is 42 years old, Viva Pete gave his backers no anxious moments, taking command when called upon and winning with plenty of speed in reserve.

Palumbo rode his second winner of the day aboard Furled Flag, a $14.80 betting proposition. The day's final went to the favored Golden Play.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AGA RAY, $6.00, $3.80, $2.20; HOGARTY, $24.00, $7.60; REE, $2.20.

AGA RAY followed DEBBIE closely until, moving into command midway of the final turn, saved ground when in front and came out steadily during the stretch drive. HOGARTY saved ground from the beginning, responded to pressure and outstayed REE. Latter, poorly ridden, was taken very wide from the start. She closed with a belated rush in the last quarter mile. DEBBIE had good speed while setting the early pace but failed to stay when challenged. MISS PATCHES could not threaten. MANUAL broke slow and was never a factor.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:08½. Winner, L. L. Seitz's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN DROPS, $4.60, $3.20, $3.00; MINT BUD, $3.60, $2.80; FLOWER TIME, $2.80.

SUN DROPS, prominent from the beginning, displaced MINT BUD when leaving the back stretch, but had to be kept under severe urging until reaching the close. MINT BUD outran her field to the first turn, was steadied until challenged, then held on courageously. FLOWER TIME raced in the first flight throughout and held on willingly for the closing test. GAGNE finished with good courage after racing well placed. CORVINE was unable to threaten. MAYETTA was outrun. The others never figured.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:37½. Winner, H. J. Horr's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FEUETTE, $18.80, $8.20, $4.60; LOCH LONDON, $4.20, $3.00; DARK LOVELINESS, $3.60.

FEUETTE bettered her position on the outside after reaching the backstretch, swung to the outside when engaging LOCH LONDON and, closing with good courage, was up in the last 70 yards. LOCH LONDON sprinted into a clear lead in the first half mile, saved ground all the way, but tired after reaching the homestretch. DARK LOVELINESS was kept under strong pressure after reaching a contending position early, but failed to rally when put to a hard drive. SPEAR began slowly and worked her way up on the outside. MAGIC GIFT could not menace when put to a drive. ROLLING ALONG weakened early.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:05. Winner D. T. Dorner's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VIVA PETE, $3.00, $2.80; $2.20; BRIGHT SPIRITS, $6.80, $3.20; DARK AYR, $2.60.

VIVA PETE went through on the inside in the first half mile, opened up a clear lead when reaching the front and came away at will to win with a great deal in reserve. BRIGHT SPIRITS went forwardly from the beginning and continued strongly when the final issue came, but was no match for the winner. DARK AYR bettered his position steadily after being slow to settle in his stride, lost ground, but finished with good energy. GOLD STREAK began to tire after going seven furlongs. ON TRIAL had no excuses. MISS ALPHONSO lacked speed and was never dangerous. BARNEY SEXTON stopped after making early effort.

FIFTH RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $300; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32½. Winner, Mrs. M. N. Bond's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JINNEE, $4.20, $3.00, $2.40; DONNA DULCIN, $11.60, $4.00; CORNER BOY, $2.80.

JINNEE outran his field to the first turn, was rated until reaching the homestretch then came out readily after saving ground. DONNA DULCIN moved up gamely in the last five-sixteenths and came through on the inside of UP AND UP, but could not threaten the winner. CORNER BOY saved a lot of ground throughout the running and finished willingly. UP AND UP forced a steady pace for the first six furlongs, but tired under punishment for the closing drive. ELDEE could not reach contention at any stage. FLYING DERE was never a factor. MISS CYLLENE was in trouble from the start, failed to respond to the first turn and could not menace after being eased back.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:02½. Winner, C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FURLED FLAG, $14.80, $7.40, $3.60; HOT GRIDDLE, $19.00, $5.80; PENCADER, $2.80.

FURLED FLAG, going in sharply improved form, moved into contention on the inside after making the first turn, wore HOT GRIDDLE down when nearing the homestretch then drew out into an easy lead in the closing furlong. HOT GRIDDLE began quickly and could speed until being overtaken, saved ground and barely lasted to outstay PENCADER. Latter forwardly placed in the early running, finished courageously under stout pressure. DOJO closed strons from a slow beginning. SOUND MONEY went evenly. IDLE FLIRT was timidly ridden and lost ground all the way. BUNGALOW tired.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:31½. Winner, Mrs. J. C. GOLDEN PLAY assumed command shortly after the start, saved ground while making the pace, shook off MISS CATALAN and drew out easily in the last half mile. MISS CATALAN was rushed around her field to chase after the winner, but was made too much use of and she weakened in the last five-sixteenths. BAY WRACK could not improve his position when put to a hard drive. GEORGE JESSEL closed a big stride. MISS BELIZE was unable to threaten. POST BRIGADE was eased out of tight quarters early, but would not extend himself.

Who Will Be New Sensation? D. C. Golf Pros' Hopes High

By Dave Herman.

AS Washington's contingent of professional sharpshooters moves on this week for the annual Coast-to-Coast gold digging rush, the big question on the lips of many golfers is, "Who will be the sensation during the 1935-36 season?"

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood's ace tutor, who shuffled off to Florida early yesterday, and Roland Mackenzie, young Congressional pro, who left in his de luxe car and trailer, are hoping against hope that they will be the lucky persons.

Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor, who is getting better and better with each passing month, also hopes the golfing gods will be good to him in this, his first serious winter campaign.

Al Houghton and Mel Shorey and Bob Barnett will play in several Florida tournaments, but are not going over to the Pacific Coast. "But every little bit helps," these three say.

Bristling with confidence, Cox left with this thought in mind:

Five years ago he was the leading money winner and sensation, piling up something like $10,000. Two years ago he cut another nice slice of around $4,000 out of the money pie. He is in great shape, both physically and mentally, and his game is as good, if not better, than ever.

"Why can't I do it again?" he asks.

Years ago Walter Hagen was seated firmly on the throne. And then came a youngster, one Gene Sarazen, to dominate the pack. They won all the big championships that were to be won, including the British and American Open, the Western Open and the National P. G. A.

Craig Wood, the blond Deal, N. J., shotmaker, was the kingpin in 1932-33, amassing a total purse of $5,780.08, after winning all of the important tournaments in California.

The following season Paul Runyan, better known as "Little Poison," showed his heels to the professional crop, rolling in wealth to the extent of some $7,500.

Incidentally, Runyan, the former Arkansas dairy boy, is a protege of Wood.

Last season it was Henry Picard, the Hershey Hurricane, who blew his way to stardom with victories in California, the East and the South. His winnings amounted to more than $8,000, and he had an average of a fraction more than 71 shots for each 18-hole round.

Johnny Revolta, the Wisconsin flash, who won the National P. G. A.; Harold McSpaden, of Kansas City, who came into prominence with three big California victories, were other stars of the past season, but none touched Picard in money winnings.

Will it be a young golfer or a seasoned campaigner of the type of Sarazen, Hagen or Dutra?

The game of golf is such that no matter how old a player is, he is never counted out of a championship. Walter Hagen demonstrated this back in October in the National P. G. A., when he won the medal with two sensational rounds.

Revolta, the boy with the Lincoln profile, seems to be the favorite. Vic Ghezzi, Deal (N. J.) Italian star; Byron Nelson, the Texas ace, and Jimmy Thomson, world's longest driver, are others who will have something to say about the big tournaments. And there is Paul Runyan to be reckoned with in the winter crusade.

Orville White, unattached Missouri professional, got off to a flying start when he won the Midsouth tournament at Pinehurst recently. Whether he can maintain this pace is another story.

And what about the National Open champion, Sam Parks?

The first big test will be the $10,000 Miami Biltmore.

S. M. U. Record Called Most Impressive

Faced and Overcame Heavy Odds in Triumphing Over T. C. U.

out of the post-season picture there remained no doubt of S. M. U.'s claim to preferment.

Louisiana State's great finish clearly entitles the Bayou Tigers to a place among the Nation's leading five teams. After dropping the opener to Rice, on a close decision, L. S. U. ran up nine consecutive victories. Bernie Moore's aggregation performed so convincingly over this stretch that it rates on a par with its Texas neighbors. The Tigers, for instance, doubled Minnesota's margin over Tulane and walloped all outstanding challengers for Southeastern Conference honors.

The teams listed in the lower half of our "top ten" get the benefit of the doubt for having one off-day or being the victim of a close decision. Stanford and Ohio State came close to enjoying unbeaten seasons. Each lost under extraordinary circumstances, Stanford to U. C. L. A., with Ted Key starring, and Ohio State to Notre Dame's inspired last-period rally.

North Carolina took a pasting from Duke, 25 to 0, in one of the year's biggest form reversals. The Tar Heels cannot "throw this one out," as the saying goes, but they can point to a record otherwise as impressive as any in the South.

California won nine straight before cracking under Stanford's pressure, but the Bears undoubtedly belong among the Nation's ten leaders. Fordham, despite an early season shellacking from Purdue, finished impressively and gets the call as the East's second representative in the select list.

Sleuths in Opener.

Boasting a formidable array of former college talent, Bureau of Investigation will launch its Government Basketball League campaign tonight at the Y. M. C. A., where it faces the State Department tossers at 9:30 o'clock. Herb and Jim Thompson, Downey Rice, Bernie Jones and Tom Lynch probably will appear in the Sleuths' starting lineup.

Palace Gridmen Drill.

Palace Athletic Club gridders will practice tonight at the armory, Water and O streets southwest, in preparation for Sunday's game with Fredericksburg. Coach Mike Scanlon wants all players to report promptly at 8 o'clock.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 2.

Dear Al:

Leave it to "The Battle of Charles Town" to bring new thrills to racing. The man who writes the possible daily-double pay-off figures must have been reading the financial pages. Somehow he posted fortunes on every combination in the third race, despite the fact that Sundrops, a favorite, won the first half of the twin bet. However, an eraser solved the problem. Most of the money in the hundred column was wiped off the slate at one sweep while the customers groaned. And then there was those closing odds of 10 to 11 displayed on Jinnee. But it was all in good fun and we can expect improvement tomorrow. I forgot to mention that Jockey O. Follin was dubbed "Only" the minute boys looked at the programs. Efforts will be made later in the meeting to have him ride the horse Only Foolin. I wish to report that T. C. Brady, the man who straightened out this track last summer, is in the stewards' stand and we are assured a run for our money.

Lou Little Says Methodists Will Swamp Stanford.

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Chuck Siegel did not start the Fordham-N. Y. U. riot. He tried to stop it and landed in French Hospital with a chipped hip . . . Southern Methodist will murder Stanford, according to Lou Little . . . Handsome Izzy Gastanaga, the Basque who meets Joe Louis in Habana, is a success at last. He has been sued by five senoritas and three managers, according to our Cuban sports-writing pal, Pepe Conte . . . Big Bill Dwyer takes a fresh bankroll South to open Tropical Park in Miami next week . . . All the gangsters and their molls who drain into the Florida winter playground will avoid the fingerprint law. Only a handful of pinochle-playing waiters and coolie labor show gals are to be inked up. Plain clothes dicks from every big burg in the Nation wangle free vacations to mix with the punters at Hialeah, Tropical Park and the winter pooch pastures, but in 10 years they have failed to make a pinch of importance.

Bold Michael McTigue is the new master-mind for Bob Pastor; this heavy's a cinch to be a top fighter in a year . . . Jock McAvoy, latest Limey bopping import, is a dead rap for Ted Kid Lewis . . . former Lightweight Champion Al Singer has copped a leaf from Boniface Dempsey's book. His new hash hutch opens on West Fifty-second street . . . Dizzy Dean has a brindle bull pup named Pistol Pete which has more tricks than Rabbit Maranville . . . Mickey Cochrane wants Pinky Higgins, but the Yanks have him all sewed up—almost . . Hey! Don't forget that Spearfish Normal, of Spearfish, S. Dak., is undefeated and untied.

JOE MANIACI'S story of an attempted bookie bribe almost cost his club a bid to the Sugar Bowl . . . Easton (Pa.) High pays Coach Elmer Carroll $3,300 a season, which is more than some rahrah plants pay . . . Stanford scouted Princeton at the Yale-Princeton game.

Elmer Layden at Notre Dame confides to pals he is preparing himself for the possibility of losing from three to five games in '36 . . . New York may see the "finals" in the assorted bowl championships next year when the Mustangs and the Rams meet in the second game of the season. Time for some song belter to go one about sugar and roses . . . Pitt and Ohio State also collide on the second Saturday. The eliminations begin early . . . Psychological experts claim the Navy will have better teams when it learns to mix more efficiency with emotions. West Point has the prescription.

After Jim Browning flops to Dan O'Mahoney in Baltimore tomorrow night all the rasslers who have been victims of the Irish Whip will stage a round robin for the championship. Dan will take his title back to Ireland with him and then technically "vacate" it.

BILL OBERT, who has been riding race horses for 27 years, won with Viva Pete at Charles Town. Bill is rated the best exercise "boy" in America . . . Eastern goal posts are draped with live electric wires to prevent thefts. B-r-r-r.

Furr Keeps Title As 1,500 Watch

That knowledge impelled Bowen to send a towel hurling into the ring in token of surrender—a token that drew a protest from Silas—a protest mumbled between lips half closed by murderous punches, a protest from a heart stronger than the splendid physique which was unable to withstand the terrific barrage laid down by Furr.

The new arena proved more than satisfactory to the expectant crowd. Because of last-minute delays, the cheaper seats had not been painted, but in every other respect the fight site was well-nigh perfect.

The crowd of 1,500 left plenty of room in the arena, which probably will be cramped if more than 2,500 people jam in, despite optimistic claims that it will hold 2,800 or 3,000 people.

Burk K.O.'s Ferrar.

To Kirk Burk, former District amateur heavyweight champion, went the honor of scoring the first knockout in the new palace of punch. Matched with ponderous, but always dangerous Jimmy Ferrar, of Baltimore, Burk appeared gunshy for three of the scheduled six rounds as the result of his knockout at the hands of Joe Lipps. In the fourth round, however, Ferrar left an opening as he was crowded to the ropes and down he went for the full count from a smashing right to the chin whiskers.

Jimmy Lancaster, of Wilmington, Del., made an auspicious debut into Washington ring circles by soundly trouncing Sammy Seaman, the Alexandria bantamweight, in a six-round contest even more one-sided than the unanimous decision in favor of Jimmy would indicate.

Eddie Burl, Jacksonville veteran, was awarded a unanimous decision over Billy Landers, Norfolk featherweight, in a catch-as-catch-can six-round preliminary which was entirely devoid of science, but slated with action from gong to gong.

State Rivals Vie in 24th Meeting

Terps' Brilliant Backs Hope for Dry Field at Baltimore.

WESTERN MARYLAND can have the cash but Maryland wants the goal posts, symbolic of victory, when the Terrors meet the Terps Saturday at Baltimore in their final game of the season.

Proceeds derived from the fray will be donated to Western Maryland to aid in financing the erection of a field house, and a record crowd for a State attraction is expected to see the game. Maryland has agreed to give its percentage of the receipts to its ancient rival, but that's where charity ends, insofar as the Terps are concerned.

They have a good chance of winning—if "Sunshine" Campbell breaks an arm, or Stan Benjamin and Lou Lassahn develop severe Charley horses. But if this trio is in harness it looks like an even battle. Last week, with "Sunshine" throwing the ball, they put on an aerial show that would have shamed Southern Methodist, and came from behind a 10-0 deficit to defeat Georgetown, 14-10. A repetition of this would be fatal to Maryland's hopes Saturday.

Brilliant Backs.

But the Old Liners believe they can outscore their opponents with their brilliant array of backs, a good line and superior reserves. On a dry field it will be difficult to stop Guckeyson, Headley, Stonebraker, Gormley and the rest, and speaking of repititions, Guckeyson needs to do only as well Saturday as he did against Georgetown to give the Terrors a miserable afternoon.

This will be the twenty-fourth meeting between the schools, Maryland having won 13 games to Western Maryland's 10. There have been no ties. Generally speaking, the games have resulted in sky-scraper scores with but few exceptions. Maryland's best efforts produced victories of 52-0, 51-0 and 41-6, while the Terrors' best afternoons brought them 39-7 and 36-0 decisions.

Roosevelt Five Host Today In Opener

POSSIBLY still tending to heave a forward pass at the basket or to light out for the opposing goal after nabbing a toss, Francis Beamer and Spiro Kolius, Roosevelt's outstanding football players, will lead the Rough Riders in their first basketball game of the season this afternoon with Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's Montgomery County champions as the opposition.

It also will be the first basketball affray of the Capital area season. The toss-up is due for 3:30 p. m. at the Roosevelt gym and will signalize the opening of Roosevelt's new basketball regime under Coach Herman Littman, former N. Y. U. court flash.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase is understood to have lost some of its 1934-35 power by graduation, but the hard-fighting squad which went to the semi-finals of the Washington and Lee University tournament last year is still largely intact. The two schools did not play last season.

Six Letter Men Back.

For Roosevelt the game marks the start of one of the most encouraging seasons the Rough Rider school has seen in many years. No less than six letter men of last season's team have returned to school and the team which takes the floor today will number five of them. The sixth, Ed Thompson, a forward, is certain to see extensive action.

Beamer will again jump center with Kolius and Capt. Morris Silverman at the forward posts. Frank Bailey, a better-than-average guard last season, is again set to take a starting assignment with Bill McPherson at the other guard post.

Coach Littman has been working the squad out intensively for several weeks, having cut it from approximately 40 players to 25. Completing the squad of the first eight men, George and Francis Coakley, sports-minded twins, give the Rough Rider forces better-than-average reserve strength.

Willis May Not Play On Court at Maryland

Maryland's hopes for a winning basketball campaign may be rudely jolted if Vic Willis, its 6-foot-4-inch center, forgoes competition this season, as he threatens to do. Key man in the Terrapin attack, Willis had been counted on to make the offense click, and his loss will be an irreparable blow, as there is no other center on the squad. Bill Androka is ineligible this season.

Congress Heights Wins.

Congress Heights courtmen chalked up a 29-to-21 victory over Sigma Nu last night in a well-played game. Oden and Shrout led the winning attack.

High School Highlights . . .

By John R. Vosburgh.

NOW that all the returns are in, it develops that only four players—all from Central—were unanimously picked by all five Washington newspapers for All-High honors. Paul Whedon, Ross Chaimson, Charlie Jones and Billy Richardson crashed the five sports pages. Chaimson was picked as a tackle by four of them and a guard by the other.

Only one tie occurred. Three papers picked Ed Lloyd, of Western, at tackle, and three leaned toward Earl Fox, of Eastern. Your All-High team consensus, then, sums up as follows:

Pos.	Player and School.	Newspaper Votes.
L.E.	Whedon (Central)	5
L.T.	Chaimson (Central)	5
L.G.	C. Jones (Central)	5
Center.	Schulman (Tech)	3
R.G.	Preiler (Tech)	3
R.T.	Lloyd (Western)	3
R.E.	Fox (Eastern)	3

L.H.	Hatch (Western)	3
R.H.	Richardson (Central)	5
F.B.	Jones (Central)	5
	Crimmins (Tech)	4

On the same basis your second team would name itself. Figuring first team votes at least qualify them for second honors, the choices would be:

Pos.	Player and School.	Newspaper Votes.
L.E.	Brand (Eastern)	2
L.T.	Fox or Lloyd	3
L.G.	Papanikolas (Roosevelt)	3
Center.	Meechehan (Central)	2
R.G.	Herman (Eastern)	..
R.T.	Hayman (Roosevelt)	..
R.E.	Miller (Eastern)	..
Q.B.	Vermillion (Central)	2
L.H.	Shugrue (Eastern)	1
R.H.	S. Wells (Tech)	1
F.B.	Moran (Central)	..

Herman, Hayman, Miller and Moran, while drawing no first team votes, led in second team ballots for their respective positions.

After our eulogy yesterday of Paul Shu as the leading scorer of the Capital area's high and prep school circles, unfortunately neither he nor we had the satisfaction of seeing his name at the top of the list. The list of leading scorers and the total inter-high scoring, of necessity omitted yesterday, follows. Note that Adam Zinkeivich in three games averaged 16 points per contest for Devitt Prep.

This department still holds that Brand is a better All-High choice at end than Beamer, despite all the latter's passing and punting. At the risk of bringing down upon us the wrath of all Central followers we venture to assert that Brand was the outstanding end of the series, Whedon to the contrary notwithstanding.

Shugrue, because he was a sophomore, obviously was given the run-around in some selections. There was little to choose between him and Hatch on the series play. Hatch should have a great college future ahead of him. Stan Wells, though a fast runner, was the most over-rated man in the series; Morris Snead, of Western, one of the most under-rated.

8th Street Businessmen Win Court Game, 25-22

The Northeast Business Men's basket ball team lost a thrilling contest to the Eighth Street (S. E.) Business's Men's five last night, 25 to 22, in the only game played in the Southeast Community Center League at Hine Junior High School.

The Northeast tossers, through some fine passing and team work, led in the first session, 17 to 13. The score was tied up at 18, 19, 21 and 22, when, with a few minutes to play, Speith tallied on a field goal and Poynton on a foul shot to decide.

G. W. to Place More Stress On Defense

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S basketball team will have a national complexion, offensively speaking, its new coach, Bill Reinhart, announced yesterday as he assumed charge of a full complement of 15 players.

Reinhart hails from the Far West and is accustomed to the Pacific Conference style of play, but he is well schooled in the various types of offense, and he intends to utilize this knowledge to the utmost. The long and short passes, quick and slow breaks will be used as the occasion warrants, and another important factor in his plans is stress on defensive work.

Await Scrimmage.

Although the majority of players have been practicing at night for almost a month, there has not yet been a scrimmage between two complete teams. Reinhart has had them working in threes, dividing the court in half for defensive scrimmage around the scoring zone.

Tuffy Leemans, George Jenkins, George Trinastich and Pete Yurowitz reported for their initial drill of the season yesterday. Already in harness were Hal Kiesel, Milt Schonfeld, the half-pint, who runs between opponents' legs; Ben Goldfadden, Dickey, Lee Fenlon, Tom O'Brien, Clarence Berg, Walter Bakum, Tim Stapleton, George Freilicher and Arvid Anderson.

With only Capt. Jim Howell missing from last season's potent quintet, the Colonials' hopes for a successful season are better than bright.

They open up next Monday night against Shenandoah, which will be their only game at home before the Christmas holidays. Other pre-Yuletide contests are scheduled with Ohio State, Cincinnati and Richmond. A cancellation of the game scheduled Christmas Eve at Newark, in which they were to meet Villanova, has left only 22 games on the schedule, and Max Farrington, who is doing the booking, may add a few more before closing the lists.

They're Saying So:

ALONG the sports rialto the professor hears that "Fats" Cornell will attempt no ring promotions this winter now that Joe Turner has opened his new arena at Fourteenth and W streets . . . Rotund Frank Mann, who directed the boot-legged fisticuffing at Alexandria's old Portner's brewery, is toying with the idea of bucking Turner, but has no suitable place to stage his bouts.

Jack Espey, George Washington's highly publicized publicity man, won a hat from Jean Sexton, freshman coach, betting on the potentialities of a certain G. W. gridman . . . Sexton, who should have known better, having coached the lad, said the boy would never make the grade sufficiently to win a varsity letter . . . Ed Skoronsky, who went to Georgetown, resigned to complete his high school education, and then went on to fame and ill-fortune at Purdue, now is with the Pittsburgh pros . . . George Lentz, Catholic University trainer; Rome Schwagel, Georgetown publicity director, and Ralph McCarthy, Georgetown baseball coach, are cowboy movie fans and follow serials religiously . . . Catholic University's freshman basketball squad includes Bob Cannon, son of the Representative from Milwaukee; Harry Dunn, whose grandfather was a governor of Illinois and whose famed brother, "Duke," was an all-American center at Michigan, and Frank Cairo, a lad from Steelton, Pa., who won the State scholastic football championship for his team by kicking a 40-yard field goal in 1933.

Dick Mothershead is looking for a basketball team to sponsor, now that the entire Sholl's quintet is enrolled under the Rinaldi banner . . . the District Basketball Officials Association will be unofficially snubbed by two of the larger schools this winter . . . unsatisfactory work is advanced as the reason . . . officials will be imported for the more important games, and paid double the amount paid District officials last season . . . Georgetown's defeat by Western Maryland last week didn't help Jack Hagerty's prestige . . . the Hoya mentor has to produce next year, or else do some tall explaining . . . the Maryland Athletic Club may incorporate next season and go in for pro football on a small but substantial scale . . . a recent game scheduled at Baltimore between a pro team supposedly from the Midwest, was to have been played by two Washington elevens . . . it was rained out.

Matt Toomey's amateur boxing shows stand a good chance of being more profitable than the pro bouts . . . both Jim Mulligan, Georgetown coach, and Geary Eppley, Maryland tutor, think indoor track is due for a boom among local college athletes, although the fans will not have the opportunity of witnessing any competition locally . . . both expect good teams at their respective schools and will enter the major games scheduled for New York . . . Bureau of Investigation's hopes for a winning court campaign have been dealt terrific blows by the loss of Ed Hargaden and Joe Lynch . . . Hargaden's appendix was lost in a scuffle with a surgeon's knife and Lynch has a trick knee that apparently can't be controlled.

Several Loom As Leemans' Successor

Guckeyson, of Maryland, Held Logical Man to Ascend Throne.

THE football season is over, locally, but debate among the sidewalk coaches concerning the relative merits of various backfield stars is only beginning, and those vociferous gentlemen who take it upon themselves to instruct their favorites every Saturday afternoon from Section 10 are just beginning to warm to their task, or pleasure, as the case may be.

There seems to be little doubt, although dissenting opinions have been heard, that Tuffy Leemans, of George Washington, was the city's outstanding back, and has been for two years. But opinions as to which player will succeed him are widely diversified and supporters of every school have at least one candidate for the role.

Guckeyson Logical Man.

Bill Guckeyson, Maryland's hard-running triple-threat back, seems to be the logical man to succeed to the pinnacle vacated by Leemans. He has everything Tuffy had but color, and none could match the flying Colonial in this respect. There was something about Tuffy's motion that gripped the fans and won their favor. He could be tossed for a 5-yard loss—which was seldom—and look better than another chap gaining that much through the line. He walked, ran, passed, kicked and even fell in a colorful manner that will be hard to forget.

Guckeyson hasn't got that loose-jointed motion or carefree air about him that Leemans had. He seems to run like a stout woman tightly bound in corsets, although when once underway I doubt if a fat woman, with or without corsets, could keep stride with him. He does everything in a satisfactory manner, and that includes backing up a line.

Guckeyson looks good, but Catholic University has a boy in this "Irish" Carroll who may run away with the show next season. A good publicity campaign, more of "Dutch" Bergman's coaching and his own natural talents will catapult the New York State youngster into the headlines and it will be difficult to dislodge him.

Sophs at Georgetown.

Georgetown has several sophomore candidates who may burst into full bloom next season, particularly Tommy Keating, the former Georgetown Prep quarterback, who does everything but call signals like a veteran. Keating needs more experience to qualify as an expert field judge, but there is nothing wrong with his ball-carrying or passing. One of the most consistent ground gainers in the Hoya backfield this autumn, he gives promise of developing into another Jack Hagerty, and that will not make old Hilltop fans feel badly.

George Washington has Bruce Mahan, and perhaps Joe Kaufman, to rely on next season. Trinastich, Reeves and a couple of boys coming up from the freshman eleven who will give the opposition many trying afternoons, but there is a peculiar situation over on G street, with Leemans involved. One of the boys could be an All-American and the fans would still say:

"He's good, yeah, but you should have seen that Leeman go."

Devitt Lacking In Reserve Strength

ONLY a handful of football players, it appeared yesterday, will represent Devitt Prep on its expedition against the untamed Fork Union Cadets in Richmond Saturday. A rough and very ready handful it is, however, its numerical strength considerably offset by the strength of a powerful line and a power generating backfield.

A squad of but 15 men worked out yesterday at Friends Field under Coach Jim McNamara, but what it lacked in numbers it displayed in quality. The question of reserves, however, is causing the coach a bit of apprehension despite avowals of the hardiness of his starting line-up.

One or two players may report today to Coach McNamara who have been out of uniform for a period.

McKinney Starred in 1934.

Bill McKinney, an Ohio boy who a year ago was All-State quarterback, has been unable to play all season, but is expected to reinforce the Prepsters for the big conflict. Devitt has played as an iron-man team for most of the season, but Coach McNamara is taking no chances on facing a dearth of reserve material.

In the meantime, his two sensational ends, Bill Hardy and Bill Patterson, and his backfield ace, Adam Zinkievich, collaborated in perfecting a passing attack expected to go hand in hand with a running offensive centered around the catapulting drive of Zinkievich.

Realizing it will be facing one of the great prep school teams of the East when the teams take the field in Richmond Stadium, Devitt is pointing toward this game with the same zest which saw it eventually swamp the Maryland Freshmen, 19 to 0, and Bullis Prep, 18 to 0.

Talk of Conference Reunion Is Spiked

By the Associated Press.

Greenville, S. C., Dec. 2.—The Greenville News tomorrow will quote Dr. Ralph K. Foster, director of athletics at the University of South Carolina, as saying a movement is under way for reunion of the Southern and Southeastern conferences.

The paper will say that the presidents of the organizations, which originally was the Southern Conference, have been exchanging communications relative to the proposal, and that the subject will be considered at the Southern Conference's annual meeting in Richmond, Va., December 13-14.

Lexington, Va., Dec. 2 (AP).—Forrest Fletcher, president of the Southern Conference, tonight denied negotiations were in progress looking to a reunion of the group with the Southeastern Conference.

Football Deaths Match Peak Year of 1931

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Football fatalities this season equaled the peak year of 1931, when 46 players were killed, a United Press survey showed tonight.

Thirty-five deaths were the direct result of gridiron activity this year, while the remaining 11 mostly were caused by infection or internal injuries which usually were treated either too late or improperly.

Greatest fatality increase was recorded in high school ranks, where 20 lost their lives from football activity directly and six indirectly. This compared with a total of 13 killed last year and the previous high of 20 in 1931.

College football was the only division to have fewer fatalities than a year ago. Sandlot and athletic club deaths were higher, both equaling former high marks.

Here are the fatalities by groups:

	Direct.	Indirect.	Tl. 1934.	Peak.
College	2	1	3	8
High school	20	6	26	13	20
Sandlot	7	4	11	4	18
Athletic club	6	0	6	4	6

The greatest portion of high school injuries resulted from head-on tackling or inadequate equipment. The figure, however, is not as startling as it may seem because there were approximately 616,000 youths playing high school football this season as against 65,000 in college ranks.

Most of the high school deaths were caused by internal injuries, fractured vertebrae or cerebral hemorrhage.

The sandlot deaths included boys between the ages of 11 and 22. High school casualties ranged from 14 to 18; Athletic Club, which included semi-professional football, from 19 to 21, and college from 17 to 22.

Despite criticism at the start of the season that the "slow whistle" on college football fields would increase injuries, there was only one varsity man on this year's fatality list.

Regarding "Slow Whistle."

The "slow whistle" was introduced to encourage lateral passing, which meant that the referee would wait longer this year before sounding the note which stopped a ball carrier's forward progress. Many had thought this would be a reversion back to the time when the play ended only after the runner had been brought to the ground and which was one of the reasons for eight college deaths in 1931.

Two college men were killed in the Mid-West. Jack Hartsock, of Ohio Wesleyan's freshman team, was injured fatally in a scrimmage when he attempted to tackle a ball carrier. Richard J. Sullivan was killed in an intramural game at Notre Dame.

Walter M. Back, 22 and a senior at University of Oregon, died on October 13 of an infection in his leg following removal of a bone growth a few days previously. The bone growth was believed to have been caused by an old football injury, probably in the Oregon-Utah game of 1934. Back did not play this year.

The last victim this season was John Manginella, 21, who died Saturday after being kicked in the head during a semi-pro game at Paterson, N. J., three weeks previous.

Red Sox Will Play Nats In 1st of 27 Exhibitions

Boston, Dec. 2 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, of the American League, will play 27 exhibition games during their 1936 spring training campaign, General Manager Eddie Collins announced tonight.

The exhibition schedule calls for the Red Sox to open against Washington at Orlando, Fla., March 14, and closes with a three-game intercity series with the Boston Braves here April 10, 11, 12. Opponents include Washington, Philadelphia and Detroit in the American League; Cincinnati, Brooklyn, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Chicago and Boston in the National League; the Holy Cross College nine and Newark, Birmingham, Chattanooga and Richmond.

New Jersey Pro Five Faces Heurich Sunday

Heralded as one of the fastest pro basketball clubs in the East, the Bridgeton, N. J., Bears will battle the Heurich Pro Bears Sunday at 2:30 p. m., in the opening game of the pro basketball campaign in the Heurich gymnasium.

Center Tossers Drill.

With Dr. Jack Goldblatt, well-known court star, at the helm, Jewish Community Center's unlimited team will stage its first drill tomorrow night at 9:30 o'clock on its home floor. Abe Green, Abe Rosenfield, former Catholic University star; Cody Shapiro, Rube Hayman, Les Singman and Lon Askins will perform with the team this season.

C. U. Bowl Bid Would Be Welcomed

Cards in Better Condition Than at Any Time This Season, Says Coach.

WHETHER or not Catholic University's football team gets a bid for either the Sugar or Orange Bowl post-season games, Coach Dutch Bergman feels that he has one of the East's best elevens, and while he isn't pressing the issue, he wouldn't mind being invited to one of the New Years Day parties to prove his assertions.

Pointing out that the squad is in better physical condition than it was at any time during the season, Bergman yesterday opined that it was strong and well balanced enough to whip almost any given opponent.

Meanwhile reports from New York that the Cardinals were second choice to Fordham for the Sugar Bowl invitation, and second also to New York University for the Orange Bowl game. But from Miami, scene of the Orange festivities, came word that Villanova, Catholic and Ohio University were the leading candidates for the bid.

Miami U. Not to Play.

University of Miami, which opposed Bucknell last season in the first game, will not represent the South this year. Auburn, Vanderbilt and Texas Christian were under consideration as Dixie's nominee, while possible rivals for the Sugar Bowl had not been announced.

Statistics released yesterday show that Catholic gained more than 3,000 yards from scrimmage in its eight games, with "Irish" Carroll, All-District halfback, leading the parade with over 1,000 yards. It is the presence of Carroll in the backfield that makes Bergman more anxious than ever to get his team into a post-season fray where the national limelight will be focused flush on it. He thinks Carroll had the makings of an All-American and the publicity from playing in a bowl game of some sort would be a tremendous help in achieving this goal.

Announcement of the committee's choice in the Orange Bowl game probably will be made the latter part of this week. Louisiana State is expected to receive a bid for the Sugar Bowl, with either Fordham or Nebraska getting the northern team invitation.

Investigation Bowlers Now Set Pace

INVESTIGATION, after trailing National Capital Parks since the start of the season, nipped the pace-setters at the wire to take the lead at the end of the first series in the Federal League last night at the Arcadia alleys. Rolling each other in the concluding match of the series, the two teams were separated by one game, National Capital Parks holding the advantage. In a match which was hard fought all the way, Investigation pulled away to win all three games. "Dutch" Newman featured the victory with a 400 set.

The Highway Department team, out of the race in the first series, claimed both individual and team honors for the night with Charlie Bernhardt shooting a 152 game and Frank Xanten a 401 set. The team shot a 628 game and a high total pinfall of 1,795.

John Blick, former Capital duckpin magnate who has established himself as the "Mogul of the Mapleways" in Atlanta, Ga., is writing a series of articles on "The Correct Way to Bowl." A more capable authority than Mr. Blick is hard to find as he has taught many of the world's best duckpin stars the fundamentals of the game.

Ida Simmons, No. 1 woman bowler of the country, whose right to the crown was more strongly established when she administered an overwhelming defeat to Lorraine Gulli, Capital ace, will soon be put to a further test, having accepted the challenge of Naomi Zimmerman, of Baltimore, in a 20-game match. The games probably will be divided between the Tivoli Alleys in Baltimore and the Silver Spring drives.

The Oriental team went into a two-game lead in the Procurement League last night at the Recreation, whipping the Romans three games. Tied for the runner-up position are the Dorics and Saxons. O. K. Sonnemann and Parler featured last night's activities with a 147 game and 365 set, respectively.

Individual laurels in the Graphic Arts League at Lucky Strike went to Williams (Hayworth) with a 138 game and Michou (Potomac Electric), who rolled a 357 set. National Capital Press topped the team scoring with 564 and 1,584.

Adair Group Gets Control Of Atlas Tack

Kermit Roosevelt One of Three Directors Who Resigned.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 2.—Control of Atlas Tack Corporation has been acquired by a syndicate of about 12 principals, including Herbert J. Adair, of Washington, according to the Sun today.

Arthur Greene, of Chicago, former owner of about 40 per cent of 94,551 outstanding shares of Atlas Tack, was reported to have sold his entire interest. His retirement from the board of the corporation and the election of Adair as a director and chairman were announced Saturday by the New York Stock Exchange.

J. A. M. Adair was elected a vice president and John A. McNaughton a director. Resignations of Greene, Kermit Roosevelt and Goodhue Livingston, jr., were accepted a week ago.

A sensational movement of Atlas Tack stock on the market some two years ago was investigated by the State attorney general and the Post-office Department.

Phillips Petroleum Retires Debentures

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Frank Phillips, president of Phillips Petroleum Co., today announced retirement of approximately $20,000,000 of the company's 5¼ per cent debenture bonds and stated the balance sheet showed sufficient cash and current assets to pay off the entire indebtedness, both current and long term.

"Earnings of the company for the fourth quarter," he said, "will show substantial improvement over the same quarter of last year. Earnings will be in excess of $3 per share after all reserves and charges for the year 1935." In 1934 the company earned $1.38 a share.

Associated Power Sales Up 10.2%

New York, Dec. 2.—Including the recently acquired Virginia Public Service Co. and Eastern Shore Public Service Co. for the first time in its net output figures, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output for the week ended November 23 of 68,284,775 units.

This is an increase of 10.2 per cent over the corresponding week a year ago. Gross output for the system including sales to other utilities was 81,531,255 units.

Wheat Prices Decline Despite Drop in Supply

Pit Speculators Await Developments in European Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Dragged down by persistent dearth of overseas demand for wheat from Canada, the Chicago wheat market today displayed but little immediate power to recover strength.

Speculative buyers of all grains were apparently holding off pending word of some striking new development in European diplomatic moves relative to Italy. Announcement that the United States wheat visible supply total had decreased 934,000 bushels was virtually ignored, the decrease being less than most traders had expected.

Great Britain Floats £300,000,000 Loans

London, Dec. 2 (AP).—The treasury tonight announced issue of a £200,000,000 funding loan and a £100,000,000 bonding issue, a total of approximately $1,458,000,000. The funding loan is a 2½ per cent issue and the bond issue, 1 per cent, the lowest in history. The former matures in 1956-61 and the latter during 1939-41.

The sum of £150,000,000, half the proceeds of the two issues, will be devoted to redemption of an issue of 2 per cent bonds maturing in 1935-38. Another part of the proceeds will be used to redeem a £44,000,000 issue of 3 per cent bonds, leaving the balance available to reduce the floating debt.

Stock Market Hesitates In Slower Trading Pace

Traders Apparently Are Holding Off Until League Makes Decision on Sanctions Against Italy.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 2.—After shuffling around aimlessly most of the session the stock market backed down in the late trading today to close with losses of fractions to 2 or more points. Volume was the smallest since October 18, at 1,565,380 shares. This compared with 2,190,560 shares on Friday.

Brokers said they found little in the news to account for the late decline. In many quarters, however, the selling was attributed to the desire of traders to retire pending the final League decision on sanctions against Italy on December 12.

In spite of the general sag, a few groups were in demand. On Wall Street estimates of the best retail business since 1929, buying came into the store shares. A few rails were likewise resistant with the aid of recently reported gains in October net operating income.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the market was down .5 of a point to 54.

Steel Shares Lower.

Although the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated current operations at the best level since June a year ago, steel shares were soft. Operations for the week were put at 56.4 per cent of capacity compared with 55.4 per cent last week.

Some explained the liquidation in the light of the statement of the magazine steel, which said cancellations of orders might develop owing to the failure of finished steel prices to advance as expected.

Sharpest gainers among the rails were Atlantic Coast Line at 33¾ and Norfolk & Western at 202¼, each up 2¼; Erie first preferred was up 1 point at 17. St. Louis Southwestern preferred gave up 4½ to 19¼, under offerings stimulated by uncertainty over oncoming maturities.

Firestone and Jewel Tea were both up fractionally. The former reported net profit for the year ended October 31 equal to $1.53 a share, compared with 71 cents in the previous fiscal year. Jewel Tea declared a special dividend of $1.

Issues off fractions to 2 or more points included Air Reduction at 169, Chrysler at 80¾, Bethlehem Steel at 47¼, Du Pont at 136⅜, General Motors at 53⅛, Westinghouse at 89⅞ and U. S. Steel at 46½.

American Can was down 3⅞ to 137¾, while American Telephone sagged 3¾ to 154½. Montgomery Ward was up ⅛ to 37½. Phillips Petroleum was up ½ to 34⅜, following announcement that the company would redeem $20,000,000 of its debentures.

Bond Market Dips.

Confronted with unrest over the St. Louis Southwestern maturities, obligations of the road suffered losses ranging from 5½ to 15½ points. The bond market was generally lower in spite of the satisfactory reception accorded the United States Treasury issues calling for $900,000,000 in new money.

One development noted in the financial district was the recent reported shrinking of equity buying from abroad. Should this buying fail to revive, the market would be without one element of support which has been considered important of late.

The foreign exchange market was quiet. The pound sterling was down ⅝ of a cent to $4.92¾. The French franc was .00¼ of a cent higher at 6.59⅛ cents. Steadiness of the other gold bloc currencies was seen by some as symptomatic of momentary passing of fears over the French fiscal position.

Wheat closed ½ to 1 cent a bushel off, corn was unchanged to ⅝ of a cent lower. Cotton was 20 to 35 cents a bale higher.

Railroads in Market For Steel Supplies

New York, Dec. 2 (AP).—Chicago Great Western Railway Co. has ordered 7,000 tons of rails and track accessories from Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co., a U. S. Steel Corporation subsidiary, and Inland Steel Co., according to Railway Age.

The Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific has ordered 10,000 tons of rails from Tennessee Coal & Iron Railroad Co., also a subsidiary of U. S. Steel. Northern Pacific, says the publication, is expected to enter the market for 60,000 tons of rails.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

PROPHECIES of an economy wave in the next session of Congress are being made with increasing frequency and emphasis by political and economic leaders.

Such a wave will be resisted by labor organizations, it was declared last night by N. P. Alifas, president of District No. 44, International Association of Machinists.

BAKER.

Mr. Alifas expressed the hope that the wave will not be a serious one, but such as it turns out to be he pledged support of his organizations to resist it in order to protect the jobs and conditions of employment of Government employes.

"Powerful influences of national scope are even now 'warming up' with the object in view of making aggressions on the wage earner's standard of living and to reduce to the minimum the power of resistance of employes through their labor unions," the labor executive said.

"Any economy drive in Congress means loss of jobs and loss of purchasing power. It may be your job that is at stake, or the jobs of those whom you will be obliged to support if they lose out. Remember that Federal relief is about to be abolished, after which the unemployed will have to be supported by the working members of the wage earner's families from which they come."

Mr. Alifas referred to the pending controversy regarding industrial unionism, stating the hope of the labor movement is to disappoint its enemies who may seek to profit from this division of opinion. He said that the crafts unions had won many rights for labor, without which any plan of industrial organization would have been impossible.

Opportunities for Women.

"Opportunities for Women in Government Service" will be the subject of two addresses to be delivered by Civil Service Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin today and tomorrow.

Mrs. McMillin will speak first at 11:30 a. m. today before the New Jersey College for Women at New Brunswick, N. J. Tomorrow she will speak before the student body at Mount Holyoke College at South Hadley, Mass.

In a recent golf tournament, James A. Tignor, Procurement Division, Treasury, shot two birdies and a score of 33.

Competition among the teams of the Ordnance Department, Girls Bowling League, Navy Yard, is still very keen with Capt. Helen Barry's Metallurgical and Testing Division team leading the circuit.

ONE of the three major planks in the 1936 program of the National League of Women Voters is the preservation and extension of the merit system in public service.

The league will seek in the next session of Congress, according to Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president, extension of the merit system throughout the Federal service. The league will urge inclusion of all postmasters and others in emergency and newly created agencies under civil service. League members believe that legislation to establish the merit system and eliminate alleged spoils practices must be passed if standards of public service are to be raised and waste and inefficiency eradicated.

AAA Season Opens.

The AAA Night Force Basketball League started its season with a game between the Audit and Disbursing Office teams yesterday. "Yank" Robbins, secretary of the Agriculture Recreational and Athletic Association, was referee for the first game.

League games will be played at the Y. M. C. A. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 10:30 a. m. The six teams in the loop and their managers are: Disbursing Office, Lawrence Rude; Files, Don Phillips; Night Machine Tab, Tom Wyatt; Card Punch, Harold Witherite; Midnight Machine Tab, John Freeman, and Audit, Karl Wray (P).

The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians announces its next meeting will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday at 810 7th street northwest.

Diary Guest Tickets.

You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Joe Morrison, Helen Compton and her Bryn Mawr Orchestra; screen, Ronald Colman and Joan Bennett in "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Loretta Young and Henry Wilcoxon in "The Crusades"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Lee Tracy, Gail Patrick and Roscoe Karns in "Two Fisted").

Alack! Alas!

"The spending peak is past," F. D.
I note that's what you say;
Alas, it's just begun for me,
With Christmas on the way!
R. I. E. (C).

Frank Reed Retires.

After serving 27 years in the office of the District water engineer, Frank Reed, of Gaithersburg, Md., has been retired at the age of 70. Mr. Reed was presented with a purse containing a sum of money by his fellow employes in honor of the occasion, Edward G. Grove, District water engineer, making the presentation.

Harry E. Roethe, engineer, Farm Fires section, Chemical Engineering Division, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, is scheduled to address the American Society of Chemical Engineers this morning in Chicago on "Farm Fire Prevention."

'Army & Navy' Use By Firms Banned

Desist Order Is Issued by Trade Commission.

The American Army and Navy Stores, Inc., and the Army and Navy Trading Co., both of Washington, were advised to drop use of the phase "Army and Navy" in a cease and desist order by the Federal Trade Commission yesterday.

The forbidden words may be applied only to merchandise actually procured from the War or Navy Departments, the commission held, adding that since 1932 the military branches have offered few goods on the open market.

In the case of the Army and Navy Trading Co., the order provides that for two years that firm shall be permitted to use, in connection with its name, the phrase, "Formerly Army and Navy Trading Co."

Strange As It Seems —By John Hix

ST. MARTIN Island, in the West Indies, is a tiny bit of land covering an area of only 38 square miles, yet it is as if two nations occupied the island differing totally in customs and characteristics. Half the island is a French colony, and the other half is Dutch.

Each half has its own government, set of laws, language, coinage system, religious affiliations and mother countries. They have existed side by side for almost three centuries in perfect friendship. The history of the strange double colony goes back to 1648 when Dutch and French explorers landed at the same time, each claiming the island for his nation. The countries involved agreed, however, not to press their claims against each other—and signed a treaty dividing the island between them.

On the north is the town of Marigot, a typical French settlement, while on the south is Philipsburg, typically Dutch.

Luigi Cornaro, Venetian nobleman, born in 1467, gave no heed to his poor health and by the time he was 40 physicians had given him up to die. Then, when others had despaired of his life, he decided upon a rigid set of health rules by which he practiced strict abstinence. Soon his health improved, and he recovered entirely.

When he was 83—just 43 years after he was told he could not live—he wrote his "Essay on Temperate Living." He lived 16 years more, dying at the age of 99 in 1566. Strange as it seems, Cornaro found during the last several years of his long life that one egg a day was enough food to live on.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Warning — By Harry J. Tuthill

I saw Peggy downstairs starting for a ride. Also, I noticed Monty has two chauffeurs now.
George, that extra man is a body-guard.
Lately Mr. Eldorado noticed some men following him. I've seen the man he has as a guard. Some place.
That reminds me. Last night I'm positive I saw someone behind the front door when I came in.
Naturally, I thought it was merely one of those collectors who just won't holler 'enough' on our Mr. Slow Pay nextdoor.
When he, Mr. Eldorado, said it might worry Peggy to know about the body-guard business, I spoke up real quick and said it would.
And you should have seen how that man, a millionaire, the best matrimonial catch in town, looked when I gave him to understand Peggy liked him. Ha!
Yeah? Well I'd better warn Hartford about those red-hots following people. Hello...
